THIS TIME, IT WAS THE ...
YEAR OF THE TRIBE

Somehow, this year was different.

Oh, it began much as other years have. Seniors were glad to be juniors. Sophomores were glad they weren't freshmen. Classes, textbooks, equations, arts and crafts, teachers, lunches. The usual routine.

But something shifted, and suddenly it seemed that friends were closer than they were before. People depended on each other more, supported each other more. By October we had lost a classmate and good friend, Mike Lamoureux, and his death brought us together in mourning. Suddenly, a lot of things we may have taken for granted were important.

Meanwhile, the lights were turned on—literally. Suddenly, the thing to do on Friday nights was walk on over to the brightly-lit stadium and cheer for our team. There were even snacks you could buy at the newly constructed "snack shack"! Some students dressed up, painted their faces and torsos, cheered and yelled and stomped around the stands. These students were part of the "Tribe," a group of superfans who follow their favorite Tantasqua teams with enthusiasm and loyalty.

In other words, this year, spirit was high. You felt it at the games, you felt it in the hallways, and it seemed that, facepaint or not, more people were in the Tribe than ever before.

And then the boy's basketball season started.

What more can be said about the wave of victories the boys left behind them? At every game they won, more and more Tantasquans showed up and joined the Tribe. When the team—our team—won the State Championship, more than 3,000 of us, and our families, and even community members who simply love our school, were now in the Tribe, too.

Sure, the Tribe was, as always, a group of sports fans hungry for the victory they deserved. But it was so much more than that. The Tribe was family. It was camaraderie. It was all of us, together in a moment, in a year that defied superlatives. Somehow, we needed that this year, and Tantasqua will never, ever forget it.

Left: Jesse Ferro, Kevin McKearney, and Alex Pacetti cheer and clap. Alex, where's your face paint?

Below: No gesture is too outlandish when it comes to supporting the team. Not even a bright green wig.

Left: Yes! Sarah Earnest, Jamie Batista, and Scott Adams can barely contain themselves as the Warriors come one shot closer to the State title.

Top: The cheerleaders, and all the fans behind them, wait to see what happens next. For most of the game, a Warrior victory seemed in jeopardy.

Tantasquan Dedication:

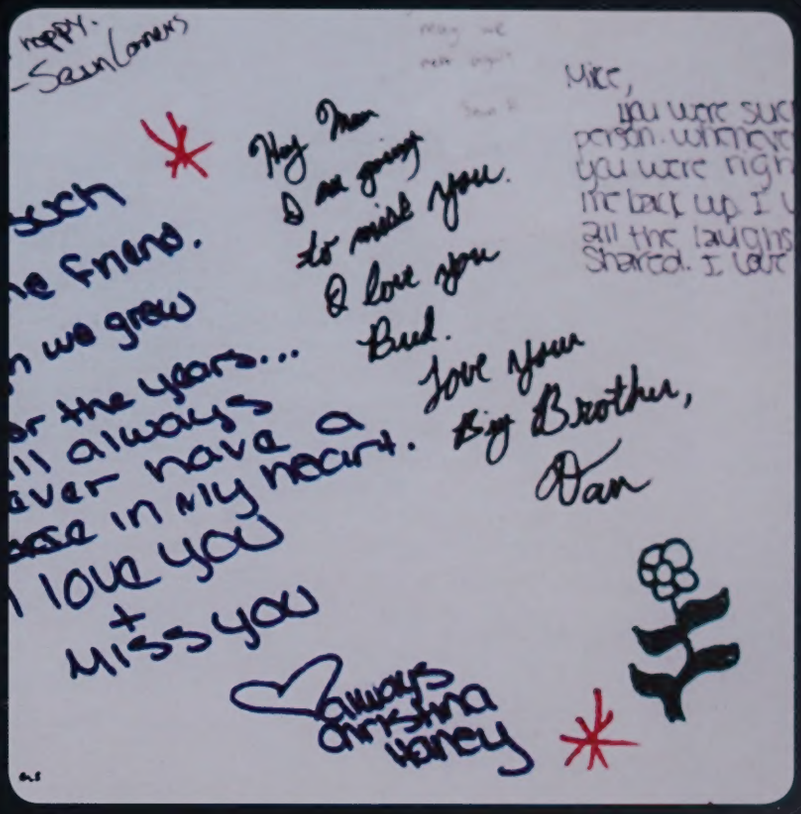
Remembering Mike

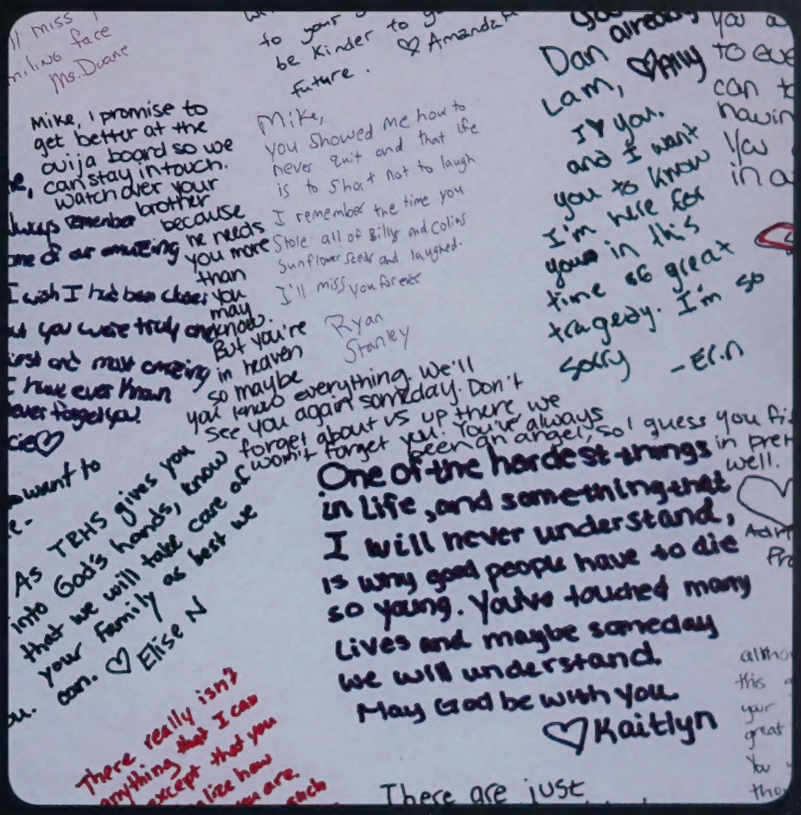
Last fall, on a cold October morning, we came to school and learned that we had lost a dear friend, a beloved classmate. And with him we lost a little of our youth, and the luxury of ignoring a far-off mortality.

Mikey Lamoureux was a lovely human being, the quintessential good guy, a great friend; that says it all, but it still somehow feels inadequate. You remember the huge, dimpled smile that compelled those nearby to smile back, or the random glasses case that turned up in odd places just before the alarm cry went up, or his incredible ability to treat everyone with respect and simple kindness. While these memories, and so many others like them, cannot by themselves convey who Mikey was and what he meant to us, they are inordinately important. We cling to them.

The essence of a person really cannot be explained, yet the compulsion to explain anyway is profound, especially when we share our memories of the way he was, how he made people feel, how much we miss him. Why this need to identify and catalogue? Perhaps it is the desire to remember accurately; we want our memories to feel solid, concrete, and true as life continues. We who mourn find ourselves forced sideways into semi-adulthood, and as we make that transition, we refuse to forget.

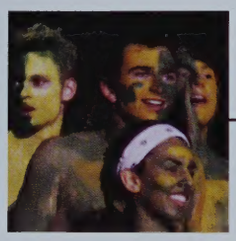
On that Monday morning, we lined up in the second floor hallways and quietly took turns saying goodbye. The poster we left, scrawled with messages, softly reflects the tear-stained faces, and echoes the whispered consolations—but it also represents the loved and cherished place where we still hold Mikey in our hearts. Some of us wrote a lot, some a little, but whatever we tried to say was a variation of a common sadness and loss, summed up by one student who wrote, in the top left hand corner, "I'm sorry it ended this way...."

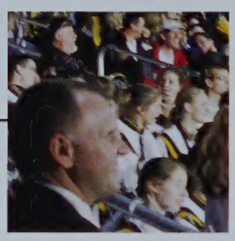




IT'S ABOUT TIME WE HAD ...

FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS





Below: As night falls, the lights come on, and Tantasqua's Warriors wait for the first touchdown of their first Friday night game.

For five years now, the lights surrounding the football field have stood dormant and dark. Indeed, it has been so long since the Warriors last took to the field under the lights that not even Tantasqua's Athletic Director Bob Casaceli can remember the exact date. According to Casaceli, changes made to the field during the construction of the new school made the lights unable to illuminate the entire field.

For this fall sports season, however, the lights were renovated and adjusted to bring back the all-American tradition of Friday night lights to Tantasqua. Casaceli thinks that the return of the night games is "a good thing, lots of fun."

And so the lights have finally illuminated the green-and-gold-clad Tantasqua Warriors, and the packed stands full of cheering fans. Outside at night, you can hear everything, from the drums of the marching band to cowbells, as the crowd clanged its warrior pride. The football team's first game, against the Bay Path Minutemen, began at 7:00 and lasted for almost two and a half hours. A "Tribe" of wild painted warriors led the charge of cheering for Tantasqua, continuing a proud school tradition.

In a booming voice, the announcer asked the crowd, "How about football under the lights here at the reservation!" Members of the crowd concurred. Moving around the stand, you heard people saying to each other, "it's pretty sweet under the lights," and "this really encourages school spirit."

One pumped up senior was althlete Mike Cronin, a member of the varsity football team, who said he is "extremely excited" about the night games. "Friday night, you know, it's a different atmosphere," he said. "You really want to kill people Friday nights."

The atmosphere was certainly filled with Warrior pride last Friday, and the fans' support for the team was palpable. The first three quarters were scoreless, but the fans remained enthused. The fourth quarter showed little more action until the last few minutes, when the Warriors managed a drive to Bay Path's 16 yard line. Coming up short by less than a yard on 3rd down, the crowd's anxiety escalated as they shouted words of encouragement to the players.

As the clock counted down the final seconds, quarterback Corey Lavallee fired a pass, and the ball was caught by receiver Jonah Faucher for a touchdown—yet there was no cheering. A flag on the field put the touchdown in question, and quieted the crowd. Moments later, Tantasqua players celebrated as the touchdown was ruled fair. The Warrior fans were ignited, cowbells and all. The Warriors themselves took to the field to celebrate their 6-0 victory, huddling up before bursting into cheers.

No doubt about it: Friday night football had returned to the reservation with astounding success, made even sweeter by an early Tantasqua victory. Hopefully this tradition will remain strong at Tantasqua, and attract larger, even more spirited crowds, if that is even possible. The tradition of winning is something the fans encourage as well.

Above: Members of the Tribe gather behind the marching band, waiting for the Warriors to put some numbers on the scoreboard.

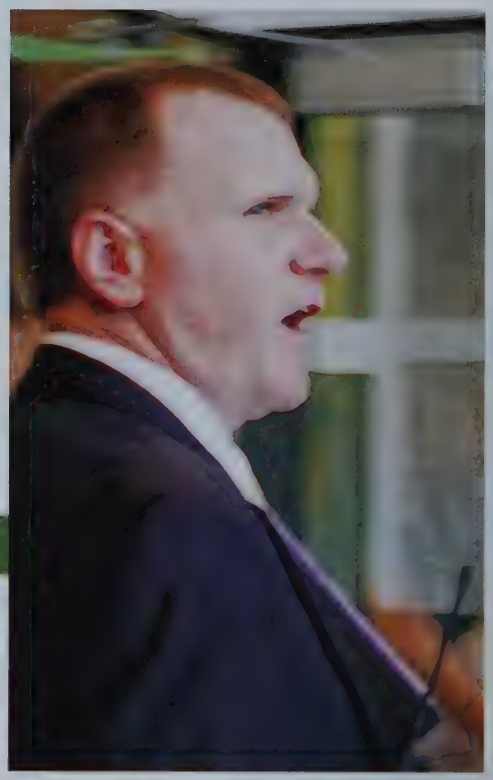
Morning Rush



6 AM, and most Tantasqua students are still sleeping. Seniors who have the luxury of driving have at least another hour before departure, but for those underclassmen, the bus comes way too soon. But hey, it's another opportunity to finish any last minute homework leftovers!

Those driving seniors often wait until the last minute to leave, and at 7:17 or so, the infamous rush of cars begins. Students who were stuck behind the last of the buses come rolling in one after another, after another, and they do not stop until 7:41. Car after car finds its own nook in the parking lot at Tantasqua, in the meantime dodging any accidents, waving "hi" to Mr. Dobrowolski, and taking care to park and leave enough room for them and their book bag to get between their car and the car next to them.

At the same time, the buses are finally letting out at 7:20 on the dot. The underclassmen stroll in the front doors to the greetings of roaming faculty members and administrators. Bus after bus brings in student after student, and in a matter of 10 minutes about 800 kids enter those front doors. During the winter and rainy days we can all remember the slippery floors caused by the rush of wet shoes draining on the floors. It even becomes a form of entertainment, watching clumsy students slipping and sliding through the front foyer and up the stairs.

The students fill the once-empty corridors almost to the brim of capacity. Lockers open and close, sometimes twice in one morning. Window seats are taken by kids who are are already chatting it up about the latest gossip. Wherever you go, you're likely to hear Principal Bliss's famous "Good Morning" ringing through the halls as he makes it his obligation to greet every single passerby. Teachers are out patrolling the hallways and making sure everyone's attire is satisfactory for yet another school day. The last minute senior stragglers walk in at 7:40, already late for school and even later due to the mile they had to walk from the second, faraway parking lot. After the warning bell, hardly anybody stirs at first. And then a slow mass movement starts, and by the 7:42 bell everyone is in class and ready to go. And thus goes the morning ritual of Tantasqua Regional High School.

Right: Mr. Bliss greets students on the first day of school. Little did students realize how common his morning greetings would become. "Good morning! Good morning! Good morning! Good morning, young man! Good morning!"

IN THE CITY

Below: The dance floor looks packed here! Hopefully nobody's toes got stepped on in all this crazy dancing.

Below Right: Cassie Parys and DJ Minchoff cut it up on the dance floor!

In light rain and chilling weather for the second consecutive year, students lingered in the vestibule and gym corridor at 7:00pm on a mid-October Saturday, waiting to get into the auditorium for homecoming. Soon enough, teachers let the eager students inside. "Let's move to the gym; you're hear to dance, not stand around," some said.

As students walked into the gym, they found it decorated to fit this year's theme, "City Skyline." This included shadows of buildings with light penetrating from behind, Chinese lanterns hanging in one corner, flashy silver stars in another, and an archway covered in white lights.

Sophomore Lindsay Wessell thought that "the City Skyline theme was nicely represented, and the fact that there were fewer lights this year was cool." Junior Kayla Mayfield added that "the decorations were really well done; it's just there should have been more of them to fill up the space in the gym."

The event's music was played by DJ and Tantasqua alumnus Kyle Twarowski. "Kyle did a very good job at homecoming," said sophomore class president Amanda Galonek. "I feel like he knows what we listen to and he does a good job at interacting with the crowd."

In addition to all the fun dancing, many students were happy to see old friends in attendance. "Former seniors coming to homecoming is like them coming home, and is like a reunion for them," junior Jeremy Overly observed, adding that "it was pretty sweet, because I got to see all of my friends that graduated last year again."

Homecoming always generates a lot of hallway buzz, and this year was no different. By most accounts, this year's dance was a terrific success, earning a bigger profit than last year. But that's not really the point, is it? Homecoming is the first big dance of the year, the first important, festive Tantasqua tradition, and the first opportunity for students to take a break from the rigors of homework and studying. By those standards, this year's event was a truly memorable one.

Left: Joe Young, Travis Pearson, Sara Hills and Caitlin Cook are in the middle of the dance floor, of course, doing their thing.

"My favorite part of homecoming was definitely the dancing. I basically have moves like Patrick Swayze!"

— Megan Hanesian

"Homecoming was so much fun. The best part was getting all dressed up and dancing with my friends all night long."

— Katie Twarowski

"I had a good time at homecoming. The way they decorated gave it a good atmopshere. I really loved dancing with my girlfriend all night long. It was perfect."

[THERE HE GOES ...]

Imagine: the house lights go down and an audience murmurs as six green lights appear circling on the railing, three to each side. Just as the crowd is becoming legitimately interested, a lone spotlight illuminates the first contestant in his jeans and bow tie. Gasps and shrieks of laughter quickly follow. One by one, each participant is introduced in the same way: Mike O'Donnell, Tyler Sapaugh, and Aaron van Dolson representing the senior class; John Canavan, Kyle Dunn, and Ryan Stanley representing the junior class. They disappear in another blackout, the MCs take the stage, and the show continues to amaze, shock, and delight the crowd.

This is Mr. T, 2006.

It's hard to identify the "high point" of the show. Perhaps Aaron van Dolson's one man duet of "A Whole New World," as both Aladdin and Jasmine, or Tyler Sapaugh's impersonation of Willy Wonka. Or maybe Mike O'Donnell's appearance as a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle could claim the honor. One of the favorite performances was the juniors' choreographed and synchronized dance routine. By far the most eye-catching outfit of the evening would have to be the lovely, turquoise, ruffled mini-skirt and black tube top ensemble—sported by Peter Grossi.

Each one of the contestants performed with all of their hearts, hoping for the honor of the night. The bumps and bruises backstage afterwards would prove it for some.

On the whole, the evening was deemed a success, and everyone involved warranted a round of applause for his hard work and willingness to put himself out there—literally. While the judges discussed the performances in the hall, the band Love Lies Bleeding took the stage to perform three songs for an enthusiastic crowd. After the encore, the judges announced their verdict: This year's Mr. T is Tyler Sapaugh. Congratulations, Tyler!

Left: Tyler Sapaugh just looks like a beauty contestant, you know? Perhaps it's his poise and grace and delicate, refined expression.

Time to Get Out of Here!

When you spend so much of your academic time in a classroom, it's easy to forget that there's a wide world of exporation out there. Luckily, Tantasqua's faculty likes to get us out of the building every now and then–sometimes to put on exhibitions of our own; sometimes to observe special shows at a museums, theaters, and colleges; and sometimes to tour a correctional facility, or laboratory, or, well, just about anything.

And, of course, these trips are often educational, but no matter what, they're always a blast. You are with your friends and you can do, for the most part, whatever you want. You escape a day of classes, and even though you have to make up the work later, it's absolutely worth it. You spend your day looking at fish or mummies or inmates or whatever you're there to see, and if you're lucky, there's time afterward for shopping and dining. These "perks" are what really makes the trip.

And when you're out of the building, your teachers usually keep from hovering over you. Sure, they may keep things in order, but you have a chance to explore things in the real world with your friends, something that can't happen in a classroom.

The best thing about field trips, though, is that they are interesting. From the bus to the destination and back, you're out of the routine, and whether the trip requires you to observe or participate–whether you arrive as a spectator or a performer–it's an important part of what makes the Tantasqua experience complete.

Right: Andrea Dumas, Jill Fassar, Alecia Suprenant, and Chelsea Norkaitis give a thumbs-up to this week's TWN broadcast.

With so much going on at Tantasqua, how can you possibly keep up with the news? In the past, there's always been the morning and afternoon announcements, but this year students took the dissemination of information to a whole new level.

First, this was the year that Tantasqua regained its own TV station. Although there is a full studio at the high school, it has been off-air for the past two years. Now, however, students are again on the air. With a new media teacher, Mr. Steve Tieri, and his TV/Studio class, the channel is up and broadcasting once again.

Each week the class produces a news show called Tantasqua Weekly News, or TWN. Each show has the weekly events reported in your typical local new style, plus a question of the week, a sports game of some sort, and more. The show is completely produced by the students of Tantasqua. Some of the footage used on the show is actually shot by the students in media classes.

Tantasqua has three news cameras in the studio and a working teleprompter. The students can type their scripts into the computer and have them read by those reporting the news. The school also purchased five new Mac computer-editing stations for the studio and five new cameras for student use. The senior documentary is created by a group of students using this equipment. The program has recently made a profit by selling copies of this year's Mr. Tantasqua.

Showcasing anything from Jonah Foucher babbling on about his three wishes to Jill Fasser's "hold my hoops girl," the Tantasqua channel is involving more and more students.

Meanwhile, in the world of print, this year heralded the return of the Tomahawk, the school's once-defunct monthly school newspaper. Students can join to write articles published and read by the entire school body. Jess Albrecht and Hillary Cesna, editors-in-chief, can be seen out and about with a copies of the Tomahawk in hand. Topics covered ranged from the construction of the new snack shack to governor Deval Patrick's inauguration. Senior Marc Riel is always on hand with his political rants, and each issue ends with a bit of poetry and photography. When a new volume is printed, you can find it at all three lunches, on various window sills, and on chairs in the halls. Many students are eager to read what the Tomahawk has to say.

As if that isn't enough, Tantasqua's journalism classes have found ways to spread Warrior news and pride. Mr. Wayne Barr's class created the Tantasqua Voice, a website filled with journalism students' words, and Ms. Pamela Norton's class posts regular news updates on a third board bulletin board.

With all this media coverage of everything that happens at Tantasqua, it's almost impossible to be "out of the loop"!

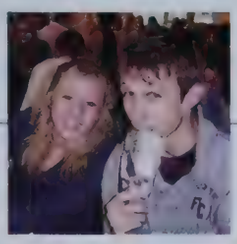
TWENTY-FIVE MINUTES ...
IN THE CAFETERIA



Below: A student holds up a fish cookie. Will she nibble away at it, or bite its head off whole?

Every day, at almost the exact same moment in the middle of almost every B-Block, someone turns to his or her neighbor and says what everyone is thinking: "I'm hungry!"

And then a bell rings, teachers abruptly stop lessons, conversations between students cease, and hundreds of desks slide against the floor as students rise and begin herding down to the cafeteria, where the doors open to a vast room of round and elongated tables that fill rapidly with clusters of famished friends.

Students enter just outside the kitchen, were the day's menu is posted. They shuffle forward, receive their main course and drink, surrender their money, and return to their claimed tables. As they eat, the chatter is punctuated by a frequent cry.

"DOUBLES, RENEE!"

The scream can be heard at constant intervals, so constant you can almost set your watch by it. And this is lunch; this is the 20-something minutes students spend each day, three times in succession to feed about 1,300 students.

It's perhaps the peak of high school social time, the one time in which excited fraternization is not frowned upon. And with only 20 minutes to eat, you have to talk fast to get all that conversation in!

Lunch is the necessary break, right in the middle of the school day, extinguishing morning doldrums and giving students the calories they need to actually be alive for the remainder of the day. To a student, lunchtime can be just as important as any class or activity.

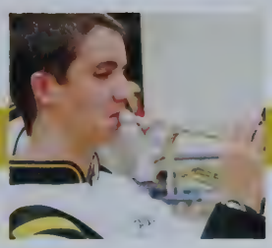
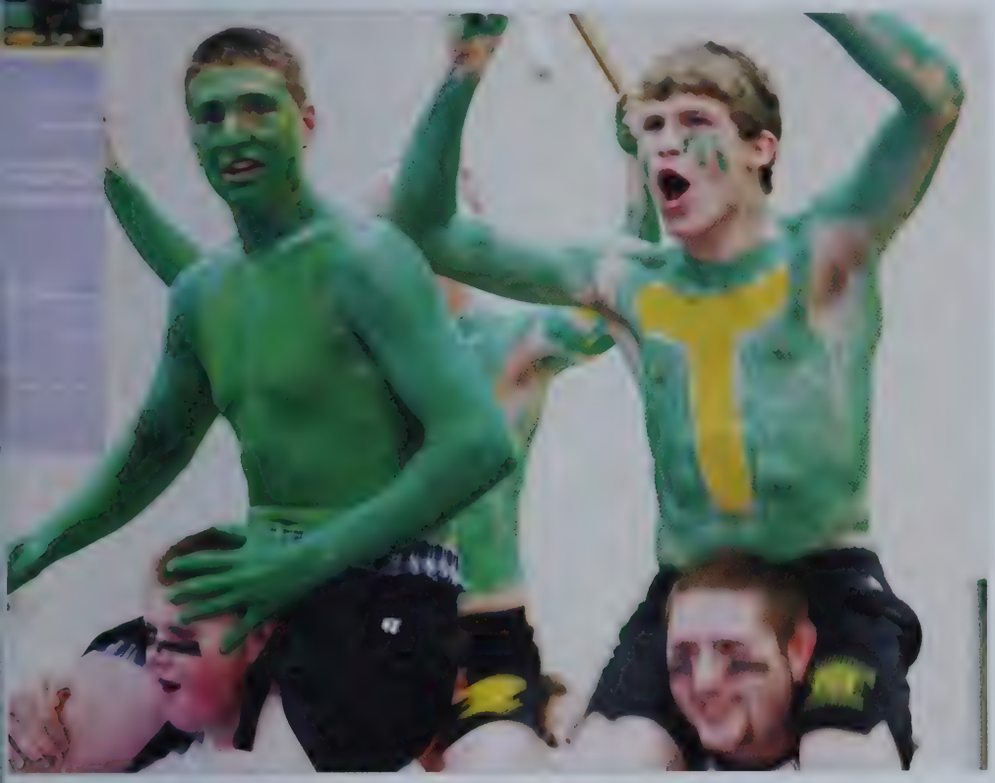
TIME FOR SPIRIT AT THE ...

PEP RALLY!



Left: Pep rally MC Jamie Batista looks like he has a lot of school spirit. Have fun washing all that paint off!



Middle: Gabe Docimo and Ryan Stanley catch a ride on the shoulders of Zack Berry and Gile Spidle.

"You'd be crazy to want one of these," proclaims senior Sabrina Boyd, holding up her bright green Senior Spirit Squad T-shirt.

"We're really going to stand out among all that black," adds another member of the "squad."

And, for over an hour at the end of October, they do, standing and cheering with their fellow seniors as the year's first pep rally unfolds. Some students have painted bright "T" logos on their faces; others have smeared their entire torsos with green and yellow paint. Classes are dressed in their own colors—many sophomores, for example, are wearing yellow—but none could beat Jimmy Keizer's get-up of yellow pants and matching yellow shirt. To put it mildly, he stood out.

The excitement is heightened here, perhaps because last year's pep rallies were cancelled after a critical editorial was published in a local newspaper. This year, however, Student Council went back to the proverbial drawing board, determined to ignite the student body. They might have stumbled onto something, as they finally seemed to find a way to keep the audience's attention and celebrate the sports teams.

As hosts for the rally, a decked-out-in-green-and-gold Kaileigh Keizer and a painted-up Jamie Batista set the tone. Tantasqua's sports teams bounded out to cheers from the audience, and were lauded for their successes. Girls' and boys' cross-country, both SWCL winners, were brought out first, followed by the golf team. Soccer and field hockey came next, with football not far behind. Cheerleading entered last.

Next up, the marching band showed off its stuff with a performance of The Star Spangled Banner. Along with the color guard, they put on a terrific show for the audience. The cheerleaders had their time in the spotlight, and the chorus performed a rare rendition of the school song.

Events followed, and as always, musical chairs was one of them. Stephen Glynn won the competition, earning cheers from the audience. Students, teachers and faculty all competed in the ice cream drop. While it was hard to see the action, it was announced that Mr. Sweet took "a big drop on the nose." There was also a pie eating contest and tug of war.

Ultimately, Tantasqua's first pep rally showcased some major improvements over those of the past, and left an exuberant student body something to look forward to: a stellar sports season filled with spirit!

In class, the issues are abstract. We learn about countries and populations, plagues and depressions, wars and catastrophies, but it's all there on the page, or the dry-erase board. Most of us don't live the difficult lives we read about or discuss with our teachers.

Nevertheless, many students at Tantasqua realize that the world is theirs to inherit, and the problems that exist are ours to solve. And so many clubs and organizations here have donated time and effort as students take matters into their own hands. Amnesty International, Relay for Life, Thomas Jefferson Forum, and the Diversity Club are just some of the groups at our school that have become active, helping world citizens.

So how do you change the world? It takes time, of course, and many small steps. All year long, we see can drives, fundraisers, and various forms of community service. And these are only a few efforts put together by Tantasquans to showcase themselves in our towns as advocates for our future.

And the movement shows no signs of slowing down. Each year more and more members dedicate time to lend a helping hand, and each year more lives are touched. Tantasqua can't change the world by itself, or all at once, but it can sure take the time to give it a try.

Each year, the Tantasqua music program astonishes its audiences with yet another spectacular fine arts performance, and this year was no different. South Pacific is a classic Rogers and Hammerstein musical set against the backdrop of WWII, in two very distinct islands located (that's right, you guessed it) in the South Pacific Ocean.

The main characters, Emile de Becque (Josh Croke) and Nellie Forbush (Chelsea Lemieux), are two opposites who fall in love and are forced to overcome a series of complicated obstacles.

enter the SOUTH PACIFIC

Along with this romance story is an underlying love affair between Lt. Joseph Cable (Aaron Van Dolson) and Liat (Marissa von Bleicken), which brings with it a fantastic substory that fits nicely into the musical's main scheme. Comic relief was supplied by players Jimmy Keizer and Emily Burdick, so the music was perfectly balanced between drama and comedy.

The most amusing part of the performance was the dance number put on in celebration of Thanksgiving by Billis. The crowd was roaring with laughter as the nurses accompanied Jimmy Keizer on the stage.

All of the students did a wonderful job accurately portraying their characters. The singing was outstanding and the pit band played magnificently. Overall the show was a great success and one that will be remembered for many years to come.

A PLACE IN TIME FOR SENIORS

As a new school semester arrives every late August, many seniors find it hard to imagine they are embarking on their final year of high school. All of us start out the same here: little freshmen, overlooked by the upperclassmen. Unsure where to go, how to fit in, apprehensive about making friends, passing classes, finding our paths. It seems, in the beginning, that our time will never come.

And so, from freshmen year on, we bravely assume our roles, adapt to new experiences together, study and socialize, not always realizing how we are slowly shaping the future. And then, suddenly, it's senior year. At last! But where did the time go?

Tantasqua has provided for us in the past four years, made us comfortable, and at the end of the school year we'll begin, as they say, a new chapter in our lives. Some find it scary, some cannot wait to leave, but no matter how one looks at it, we all have something in common: wherever we go, whoever we become, Tantasqua will be a part of us. It'll be our shared past—those four years of friendships and memories we made, many of which will last a lifetime.

Being a senior is more than a term, more than a simple class designation. It's a feeling that becomes palpable when you walk through the doors on the first day of your final year. It's a sort of woozy feeling that rushes over you, a sensation that occurs when you realize that everything you have worked for in elementary school, and junior high school, and the last three years, was to prepare for this.

Senior year comes and goes too fast for many students, and by the time seniors start to look back on their history at Tantasqua, the end is upon us. It's a bittersweet feeling that is unique to seniors. These years will be the ones remembered for all of our lives, and there isn't a better place to have spent them than at Tantasqua.

finding time to Lead the Class

The exceptional size of Tantasqua makes it something of a mini town, complete with a council that acts as the bridge between the general population and the decision-making authorities. At Tantasqua, this committee is made up entirely of students, and is dubbed, amazingly, student council. Melody Felton, Sage Foley, Jeremy Burnam, Kaileigh Keizer, and Kyle Pellicane are this senior class's executive officers.

Being a class officer is a busy job. ""We have to make sure that everything gets done on time," said class president Felton. This includes dances, fundraisers, prom, and the senior trip—in short, everything to make sure the senior class has a positively memorable year.

Even though the work is hard, there are benefits to being a senior class officer. "I have major input in what affects me and what happens during my senior year," said treasurer Jeremy Burnam. Vice president Keizer added, "[The] administrators love you and classmates look up to you."

The great thing about the senior class officers is that they do not let all their power go to their heads. All of them are extremely fun to be around and truly try to make themselves available to any student who has thoughts or ideas.

"I want to make sure our senior year is the best it can be," said Keizer.

IT'S ABOUT TIME TO HIT THE ROAD

Below: Lauren Mina and Jess Kemp try and figure out what Dan Lamoureux is doing. Did he fall, or is this just a really bad pick-up line?

Bottom: Alex Pacitti, Anthony Scott, Scott Adams, Sarah Curboy and Blake Minchoff are hanging around their cars after school like many of our students do.

Every morning, cars slowly pull into the student parking lot. The students advance into the school with glazed eyes, balancing books from every class, just trying to keep a Dunkin' Donuts coffee upright. It's another day, another time to prove yourself to your peers, study hard, and eventually graduate from the halls of Tantasqua.

Fast forward to the end of the day: if you were to simply observe the school shortly after the final bell, you would see the same steady stream of seniors herding through the halls. Unlike their underclassmen counterparts, these car-owning seniors will not be pressed with the worries of missing a bus; in fact, they can take their time talking with friends, catching up with teachers, or anything else that they might possibly have to do. For them, it's terrific.

Senior Kristina Foley enjoys driving because, after field hockey practice, she doesn't have to rush herself to catch the five o'clock bus. Carissa Gervasi prefers the benefits of hitting the snooze button, though, because it "gives you more time to sleep and get ready in the morning."

"Driving's fun! Unless you're late or you're stuck behind a huge dump truck going 25!" comments senior Sage Foley, who often finds herself rushing into school at the last minute. She still manages to find a parking spot, but usually it's far away from the door. You have to get up pretty early in the morning if you want a parking space near the school's entrance!

Most seniors prefer the extra sleep, though. They wake up ten, twenty, maybe even thirty minutes later than students who rely on a big yellow school bus as their only means of transportation. This does, however, offer a few problems with tardiness, especially since the administration has seemed to crack down considerably on the senior lateness issue this year.

"I just wake up late sometimes," shrugs senior Carl Setterlund. "Let's just say I'm a little too close to a few office detentions."

And to think, they started out riding their bikes and Barbie Power Wheels Jeeps, but now the seniors have hit the highway! Everyone else should just get out of the way.

HAVING A SWEET TIME THIS HALLOWEEN!

Below It's halloween at Tantasqua and the decorations this year were better than ever.

When we are kids, Halloween is the best time of year. Dressing up as different creatures and wondering from house to house collecting pounds upon pounds of candy—what's not to love about that? Everyone knew the houses with the king-sized candy bars, and the annoying houses where pretzels and raisins were distributed. The sneaky few of us would go around once in one costume, change, and go out again in another. In all the towns some of the older, more mature kids would do basic math equations, like toilet paper + trees = a lot of fun.

Now, at Tantasqua, Halloween is celebrated by decorating and wearing costumes of all kinds. The student council decorates the floors by class, and the first floor is occupied by the seniors. This year, the seniors took the sports hallway by a storm with decorations that included a huge spider behind the Warrior sign, webs in the lights, and banners along the walls. Of course, most of the decorations are torn down by the end of the day, but the morning is definitely fun. The experience of walking in from the student parking lot into a hallway consumed by cobwebs and ghouls, tombstones and bones, ghosts and spooky noises is, well, to die for. From stickers on the floor to things hanging from the ceilings, Halloween is the most decorated day of the school year.

The costumes ranged from single masks to the full worn attire and a few sarcastic shirts here and there. Seniors—although not every one of them dressed up—had fun watching the underclassmen get into it, too. Some admitted later to having gone a little overboard, and others were just plain weird, but the consensus was that the big blow-up suits were by far the best. Painted faces and fake blood in rubber wounds, although somewhat disgusting, were great additions to Tantasqua's Halloween tradition.

After school some students do revert to their childish pasts and go out trick-or-treating, while other students have changed roles. Those who were once on the outside of the door are now inside handing out the candy. They might think they are too "mature" to trick-or-treat, but either way, everyone knows the fun that is Halloween.

THE GOOD TIMES SPENT WITH A BEST FRIEND

Below: Joshua Malloy and Daniel Lamoureux are a common sight at Tantasqua. They have been best friends forever.

It's playtime, and all the kids scurry to grab the best toys, whether it be the red truck or the only Mr. Potato Head with all of its parts. The quickest children get there first; two kids reach down and grab the same toy. To avoid a fight—this is only preschool, after all—the teacher suggests sharing, and that's just what they do. Little does anyone know they would be starting a friendship that would last for the rest of their lives.

It's a more common story than you might think. In fact, many students here at Tantasqua High School have been friends for as long as they can remember.

It's a gift, having a person you can share secrets with, someone you can hang out with and hold onto for twelve years, knowing that the friendship is solid enough to last the rest of your life. That's the kind of friendship Lindsay Valanzola and Kim Gallant have. "I've known Kimmie forever; she's the one person I can truly trust with anything. I love her," says Lindsay.

As best friends you go through a lot together. You're always there when the other one needs you, and they are always there for you as well. From the span of a playground antics to high school hijinks, these people have lived it together. They have been through the good and the bad, the fun and the boring, and just about everything in between. The late night conversations and the early morning wake-ups—what haven't they done together?

And now the biggest accomplishment on all of their plates is graduation. Everything that they have gone through prepares them for this life-changing experience. We all have friends, people we'll remember from our time here, but these seniors have something else—that one person to get over this little bump in the road with them.

Bottom: Sisters Jenna and Brook Tasse enjoy a moment by the window. It's hard to tell them apart!

THERE'S ALWAYS TIME FOR FAMILY

For those of us who have them, an underclassmen sibling can be a good and bad experience at the same time. Most of the bad things for us are actually good things for them. They know all the secrets about us, and we know theirs, but we just love how they bring up ours at the worst times. And everyone knows how our parents demand that we bring them to school because it's "not fair" to make them take the bus, even though we had to. Of course, they think they are the hottest underclassman because they don't have to ride the "loser cruiser," but we can't be late or go somewhere after school without them tagging along.

On the other hand, they will always think we are cooler than them because, well, we are. We know more about them then they do about us and our wisdom can transform into a very embarrassing moment for them, too. They won't be able to wear our clothes because we will see them. If we aren't doing well in a class, they probably are doing worse in one of theirs, and we get off the hook. We get to pave the way for the teacher's opinion on the family name, or can tell teachers to be hard on them. We all know what fun it is when someone calls them by our name and how angry they get.

If it sounds like this can be antagonistic at times, well, sure, it can. But it's fun, too, having a family connection right there in the school, one not everyone understands. It's nice when you can count on someone who is more or less obligated to stand up for you, simply because they're related to you.

So, even with all the mean things we can do to our younger siblings throughout the years we are in school together, they are always going to be a friend and look up to us. Next year when they aren't there, we will all miss them, even if we are not willing to say it now.

Spending Time With Senior Sweethearts

Top: Kyle Moreau and Laura Satkowski have been together for over a year. Looks like they had fun at homecoming.

Middle: Laura Keith and Allen Krasnecky are having one of those conversations. You know, the kind you have when you've been dating forever, and it's safe to roll your eyes at each other.

Left: Jonah Faucher and Erin Moore are always having fun in the halls or at sports games. They are both active members of the Tribe.

Every school has a Cory and Topanga, a Barbie and Ken, a Romeo and Juliet; Tantasqua is no exception. While some couples last less than a month—or even a day, for that matter—others feel that they will still be together after high school ends. Senior couples are special because they are sharing a similar experience together. They are both preparing for college, going to their last prom, and spending the last of their teenage years together.

Laura Keith and Allen Krasnecky have been together since freshman year. When asked how it feels to be dating someone senior year, Allen responded, "It's no different than all the other years because it seems like we've been together forever, and I cannot see myself without her." Laura said, "We plan to live together; we are going to see each other every day, and I am not worried at all."

Amber Dimo and Kevin Coan have not been together as long, but they have the same feelings about their relationship. According to Amber, "Kevin and I are trying to find a way to be close to each other after we graduate, whether it is finding colleges near each other or finding ways to be together on the weekends. We plan to see each other as much as possible"

Jonah Faucher and Erin Moore have been a couple for over a year and feel like they are such a good fit for each other that they will continue their relationship after high school.

Time will tell, of course, whether these romances last forever or fizzle out in the aftermath of graduation and college. It'll be interesting to see who these sweethearts bring to the ten year reunion!

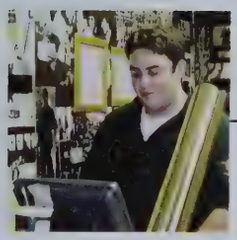
HAVING THE "TIME OF YOUR LIFE"
GETTING PAID



"Table 5 needs to be cleaned!" "I need French fries, pronto!" "Why do we never have any mayonnaise?" "Those blades need sharpening." If you have ever had a part-time job, you may be familiar with some of these phrases. High school students trying to make a decent paycheck usually fill these part-time jobs at local business. The jobs range from waiting on customers to manual labor.

Seniors in high school have many responsibilities, including schoolwork, helping out around the house, and maintaining part-time jobs. Most seniors drive themselves to all of their activities, and in order to drive, many need to buy a car and maintain it. They also like to have a little spending money in their pockets, as they are almost always hanging out with friends or going out to have fun when they have spare time.

Senior Dan Broman worked at a farm in Southbridge over the summer. He paid for his car this way, and likes to save his money. "I'm not saving for anything in particular, I just like to have something in case something comes up," Broman says. Senior Mike Cronin has the same idea in mind. "If I want to go out with the team, I don't have to ask my dad or mom for money. I can just go out and have fun."

Senior Carissa Gervasi is a little more ambitious. She, like Cronin, works at Rom's Restaurant in Sturbridge, but in the take-out area. Gervasi works four days a week for a total of about 25. Most days, she enjoys her job, which she needs to pay for her gas and car insurance. However, working so many hours per week does interfere with her studies sometimes. "I usually work five to six hours a day and by the time I get home, I usually don't study," she admits.

Some seniors enjoy what they do, others dread showing up for work. But they all have one thing in common: the satisfaction of the paycheck that comes at the end of the week. Learning how to manage money is just one in a long list of responsibilities that seniors deal with every day.

Top: Rosemary Keough seems to be enjoying herself at Stop n' Shop. Get back to work!

Bottom: Carissa Gervasi is trying hard not to get burned. The food looks delicious, though.

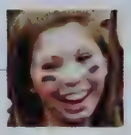
THEIR TIME HAS COME ...

EXTRAORDINARY SENIORS



The snow blankets the hills of Brimfield. All is well on a back country road, until the sound of sirens and flashing lights breaks the peacefulness. Firefighters rush to the scene of a fire, ready to extinguish the flames that engulf a home.

Someday, one of those firefighters could be Tantasqua's own Kevin Coan.

Many of us may know him as an enthusiastic part of the TWN television show, or as an Eagle Scout, or just another kid in the class, but Kevin has been fighting fires for the past five years as an on-call fireman in Brimfield.

Every day there is at least one ambulance call that the Brimfield fire station has to respond to. The winter months call for the most fires. There are usually six or seven fires that Kevin responds to during the season.

The first time Kevin entered a burning building, he wasn't sure how he would react. "I was nervous at first," he says, "but all your training comes together. You look around and see the guys looking out for you. Your adrenaline takes over."

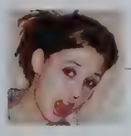
After graduating, Kevin is planning on becoming a full-time firefighter, doing what he loves to do and saving lives at the same time.

As he walks down the halls of Tantasqua High, students gaze up at him in astonishment. The only audible sounds in the corridor are the shrieks of tiny freshmen as they notice Pete's bulging physique almost tearing through his shirt.

Ask Peter Grossi about his super-human physique he will modestly reply, "I work out." To most people, "working out" is a hobby, but to Pete, working out is more like a way of life. He even goes as far as to compete in body building competitions.

All that hard work pays off for him at these competitions. Although he has only competed in two, he placed third out of 17 in Delaware. He may not have placed in his national event, but he still competed with the top body builders in the country. Not that you'll ever hear him brag about it. He's a modest guy.

So when you see Pete walking down the hall, you may gaze in astonishment at his size, but after you get to know the real Peter Grossi ... it becomes apparent that his size is his least astonishing characteristic.

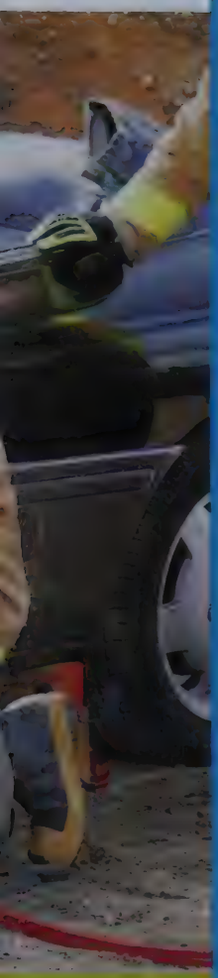


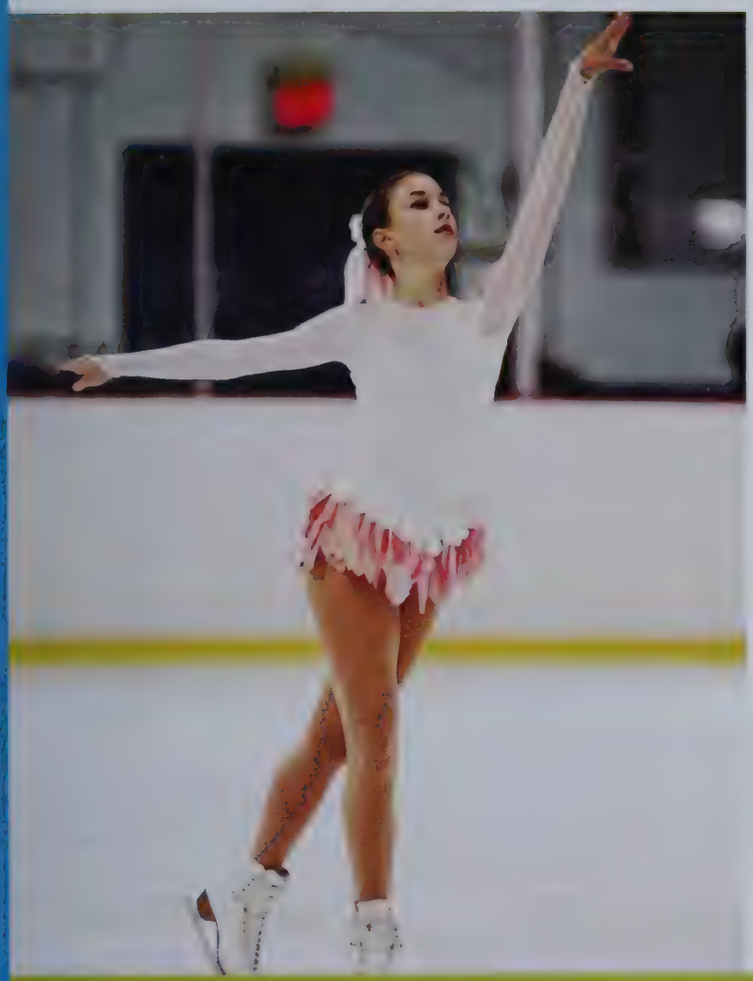
Left Top: At a Brimfield fire department exhibition, Kevin Coan effectively dismantles an automobile, just as he would if a passanger were stuck inside.

Right Top: Liana Gozdowski glides easily and gracefully across the arena. Two years ago Liana placed at a New England competition.

Left Bottom: Peter Grossi flexes at a body-building. Under all that muscle mass, he's actually a rather quiet, almost shy kind of guy.

Right Bottom: David Howard, pen in hand, bends thoughtfully over one of his notebooks. It never takes long for inspiration to find him.





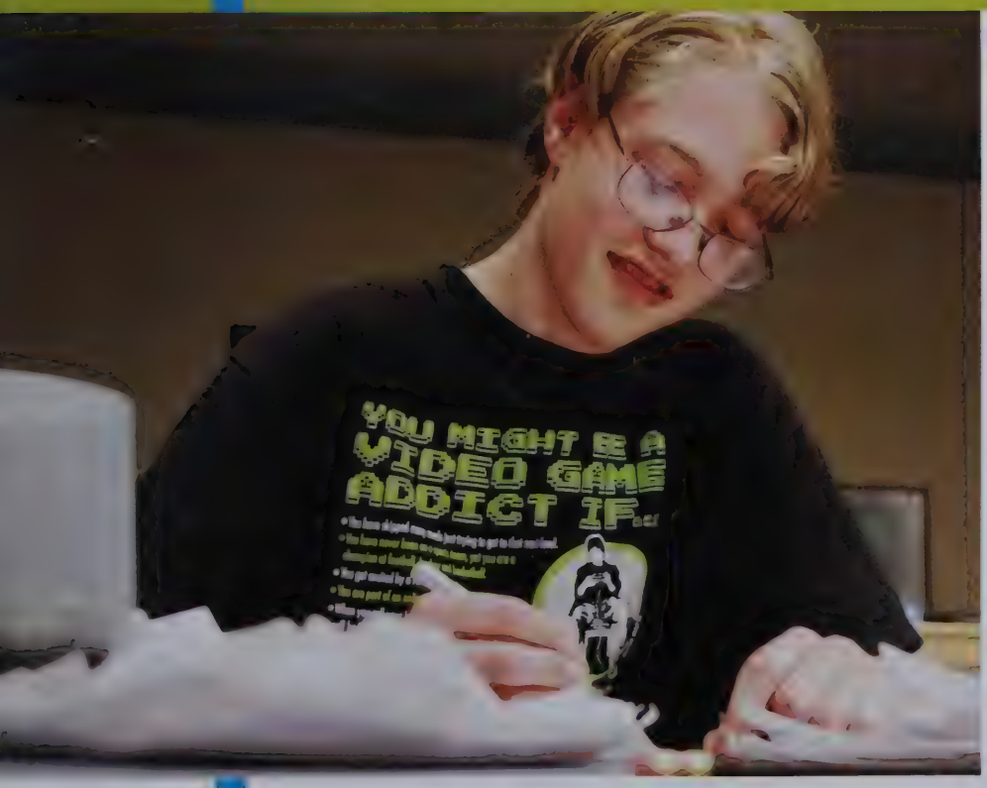
The ice glistens like a mirror as the arena's lights shine upon its glassy surface. The audience is silent. A lone skater poses in the center, her costume sparkling at blinding rates, dripping with sequins. And then the music begins, and the skater seems as if she herself is the composer. The audience watches in awe as she glides effortlessly on the ice.

What many do not know is that this skater is Tantasqua's very own Liana Gozdowski.

The first time her mother turned on the television and watched ice skating, Liana was caught up in the wonder of the skaters. "I'd always pretend I was on the ice on the hardwood floors and skate around with my socks," reminisced Liana. That was when her mother decided that this seven-year-old should be learning how to skate.

For up to five days a week, Liana and her younger sister travel to Westborough to practice. Each of them has a personal coach who teaches them new techniques and how to improve upon new ones. Aside from practicing, Liana does track at the school to stay in shape for skating, which she does all year round.

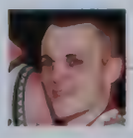
Liana will be heading off to college next year, and she is looking for schools that have ice skating programs. Maybe we'll see her in the Olympics one day, inspiring young kids to skate, just like her!

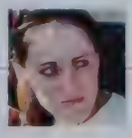


Often found with pen and paper in hand, David Howard is constantly doodling, drawing or writing. There is hardly a scrap of paper with him that isn't covered with some fantastic beast or character from one of the many books or games David loves so much.

David has been writing outside of school since the fifth grade. He wrote his first substantial work in sixth grade, and has, for the past few years, been working on a series of books. "All of mine so far have been fantasy, but I have science fiction planned," David says of his writing. "I have commitment, dedication to my storylines," he adds. But David doesn't confine his writing to his books; rather, he also writes poetry and short stories.

As this year's class artist, he hopes to eventually have a future in a creative field. "I would like to be a writer," he says. With the success he has had so far, it won't be long before his name is blazing up the bestseller list.





Right: Samantha Celko, Alecia Suprenant, Ryan Casucci, and Megan Hanesian are big Vonnegut fans. Hey, when did the junior class become so literary?

Top: In a spare moment, David Thompson picks up a copy of James Joyce's Ulysses. Nothing like a little light reading to pass the time!

Right: Coner Neal has built ... one of those things. You know, those things you make with folded paper, and then you move it back and forth, and ... yeah, you don't know what it's called either.

ALMOST THERE ...
JUNIORS PASS THE TIME

The new school year has brought many changes to the junior class. No longer are juniors the timid seventh-graders that came shuffling into the Tantasqua School District four years ago. No, they are now on the cusp of their senior year. SATS just ahead. MCAS a distant memory. College and careers so near, and yet so far away. No wonder junior year feels suspended, a sort of in-between waiting place.

This year's junior class felt most intensely the loss of their friend and classmate, Mike Lamoureux. His sudden departure forced maturity onto the juniors. Sooner or later, everyone has to bid farewell to childhood innocence and confront the randomness and cruelty of life, but this was an especially sad way for many to do it.

Still, as time moved on, many students found themselves growing and maturing into new freedoms. Many were gladly driving to school, fresh plastic licenses tucked away into wallets or purses. This newfound freedom provides a good initiation to the independence juniors have all been craving.

Not only are there a considerable number of juniors driving, but many now have steady after-school jobs. These jobs provide juniors with skills they will use later in life.

It will be better, of course, when they are seniors, when the prom they attend is the last one of their high school years, when they're just slightly older and have assumed the full stature of upperclassmen. But for now, in this in-between place, passing the time until the final countdown isn't so difficult. It's easy to focus when you're a junior, without the encumbrances of being so new to the school, or the pressure to lead it.

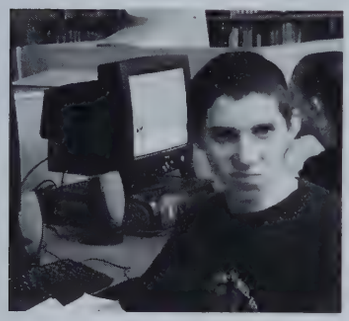
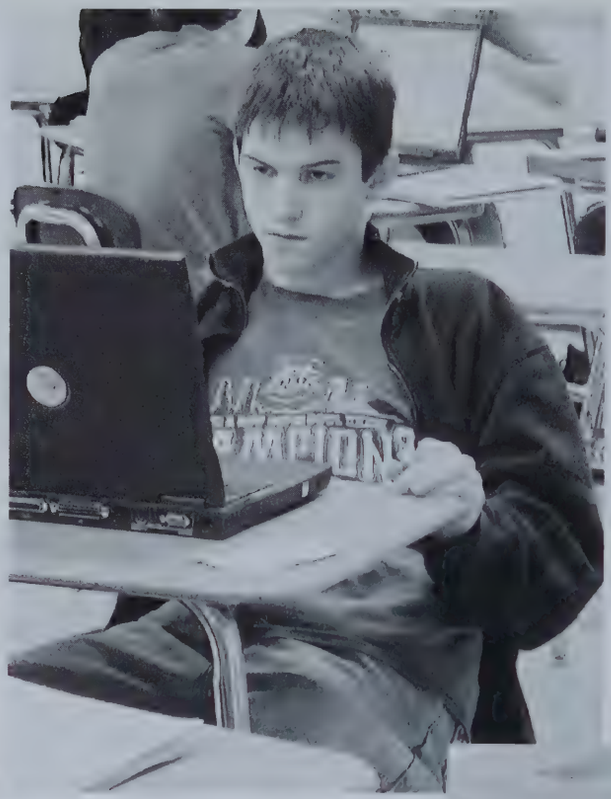
Right: Ben Bangs has that slight slouch and focused look students get when they work on the laptops.

Below: What happened? Did the computer block Drew Allard's MySpace account again? Either that, or this is his "thinking face."





Above: Something catches Paul Girouard's eyes in Fiber Arts class. Maybe Ms. O'Brien is dancing again?

Right: With backpacks in tow, Ethan Rousseau and Mike Grubert try to find somewhere to sit at lunch. That can be a hassle sometimes.

TAKING THEIR TIME ...

Finally: sophomores!

After a whole year of adapting to this new life at Tantasqua, they are able to slip out of their freshman shackles and declare, "I'm proud to be a sophomore!"

Being a sophomore is all about one word: fun. It's an experience that these former newcomers enjoy all year long. No longer are they lost and confused, wondering what lies ahead; no longer do they speculate about decisions and consequences, without really understanding the intimidating structure of the school. And even if they were never really that timid as freshmen, people will no longer assume they are lost and scared.

But they are not juniors or seniors, either—and that, too, is a cause for celebration. Not for them, the hurried college applications, the nagging of absent-minded teachers to please write that letter of recommendation, the well-intentioned but endless question posed by every adult: "So, what do you have planned for after high school?" No! The sophomores sit back, fingers locked behind their heads, feet up on their desks, and laugh. This is the year of relaxing, becoming comfortable in the school. Exploration comes with fewer deadlines attached.

Not, of course, that sophomores are lazy or complacent. Throughout the year they participate in new activities and get involved with programs, clubs, and sports that they didn't sign up for freshman year. They get to know each other better—at school, at the sophomore all-nighter, and at other activities—and they are now closer together as a class.

Sure, MCAS exams blight the horizon, and both academic and technical courses hold their own unique challenges, but Tantasqua has made them ready for all this.

Meanwhile, no one knows better how to seize the day than a sophomore!

Above: Hey! Allyson Partridge, Erin Young, Kellie Stewart, Julianna Seguin, and Deanna Connolly are blocking stair traffic between classes. Better get moving, ladies!

Below: Allyson Partridge and Michael Messier? The Allyson Partridge and Michael Messier? Yes, it's them.

Above: Joe Giroux, Ryan White, Tom Giodarno, and Nate Tong still seem to be confused where they are going. C'mon, you're sophomores!

Far Right: What are you two still doing in the halls? Ariana Talvy and Alli Jones talk as they rush to class. Rush, or stroll, or dawdle, as the case may be.

Right: "What? Lacrosse? I play football!" Eric Shine seems quite confused during his gym class as he recovers from a thump on the head. Use the stick!

Below: TJ Kennedy couldn't pass up a photo op while making his way in the school after the fire drill. Look at that mug! Ridiculous!

Right: Alli Pennan and Carolyn Curnow laugh as they do a lab during Mr. Farrell's class field trip. Tantasqua's finest with monster-size eyedroppers. What could possibly go wrong?

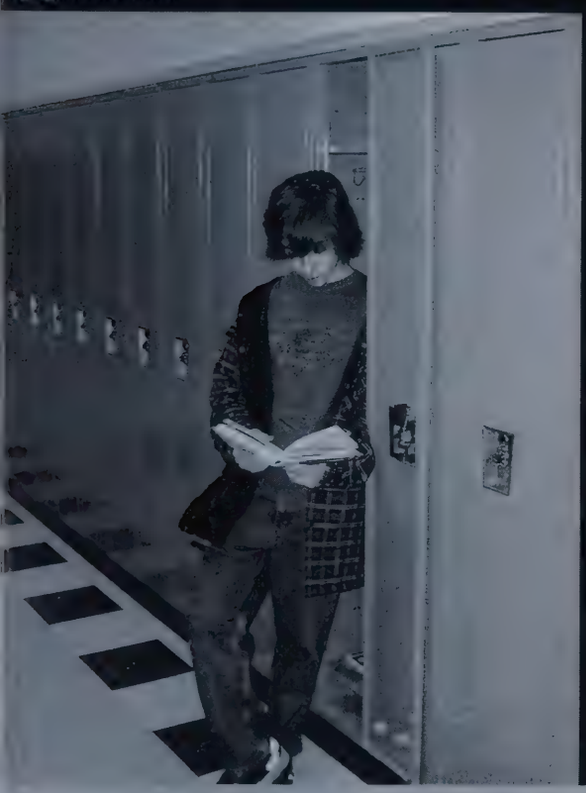
JUST IN TIME ...
FRESHMAN START IT UP

ow: A lone freshman steals a moments in the morning to . He looks pretty comfortable, h if he is standing up and ing against his locker.



Although the freshmen have just recently arrived at Tantasqua, they have successfully managed to find a home here in our beloved school community. These youngsters have spent their first year working hard and growing up. Over the next three years they will be engaging in some serious preparation for the day when they lead the school as upperclassmen.

Freshman year can be one of great confusion and frustration. It's no secret, these little ones often receive little notice from those who tower over them in the halls. Classes here at the high school are much longer and more demanding then those in the Junior High. Homework loads and academic difficulty of classes intensifies, as does the maturity and personal drama within the student body. News of who's dating whom, who's failing what, and who is or isn't in school today—these topics can always be heard buzzing about freshman ears between classes. Meanwhile, the Tantasqua veterans struggle to weave in and out of the scattered groups of freshmen who refuse to step aside in the halls. The freshman class, after all, is the most populous of the four classes at Tantasqua.

Ahead of them lies a series of exciting events. There is the unavoidable and overwhelming load of dreadful standardized testing. MCAS, PSATS, SATS, ACTS and pilot tests galore will hit this group of students right in the face in the upcoming high school years. But they also have wonderful school events, like the sophomore all-nighter, to look forward to next year. Someday, they will even go to the prom.

Hopefully, they make the most of their stay here at Tantasqua. The class of 2010 is approaching the best years of their lives. They will be sure to enjoy it while it lasts.

ve: Amber Riley explains the material to her mates before the teacher comes in.

Above: Talyor Girouard and company are absorbed in their class lecture. Apparently, whatever they are learning about is very entertaining.

Far Right: Lots of locker decorations can be found throughout the year, mostly as surprise birthday gestures. Here, a student is putting the finishing touches on such a locker.

Right: Two freshmen in the hallways get snapped quickly as they head to class.

Below: He could be listening, staring into a computer screen, daydreaming ... who knows?

Below: Before committing to a track in the tech school, freshmen have the chance to try out the program, and see if it suits them.

Below Right: Sometimes, just before the bell rings and class begins, there are a few moments when you can talk with your friends. That's nice.

Above: Ah, more freshmen on their way to class. They don't look as lost as everyone says freshmen usually are, actually.

Far Left: Hey, those are some pretty nice smiles! Dismissal for the pep rally must be in a few minutes.

Left: "Love animals, don't eat them," the shirt says. But what if you love to eat animals? Well?

the bell has rung ...

Time for Class

Sometimes, we spend so much time talking about our friends, reminiscing about all the great times we had, all the dances and class trips and lunches and hallway drama, that we forget how much time we actually spend in class. Here at Tantasqua, we follow a block schedule, so our days come at us in four 80 minute blocks. That's 720 classes in a single year, or 2,880 classes from freshman year to graduation. That's a lot of time—almost 4,000 hours, in fact!

And with whom do we spend all that time? Teachers, of course. Tantasqua has about 70 teachers, each with his or her own style. Some inspire us. Some amuse us. Some guide us, and some frighten us. We quickly learn which teachers love to spring a pop quiz, which grade with a red pen of fury, which schedule frequent and exciting field trips. We spend time with our guidance counselors, trying to get the schedule just right, so we can take as many classes as possible with the teachers who best suit us.

One thing seems nearly universal about the teachers at this school: they love the subjects they teach. Pass them in the hallways, and they're talking about books they've read, equations they've solved, music they've composed, experiments they've performed, plays they've attended, pottery they've spun.

Or maybe, after 2,880 classes with them, it just seems that way. Which is why it's so strange, sometimes, to see them out and about in the real world, at the gym, at the supermarkets and restaurants and gas stations where we work. You mean they leave the classroom after school, too? They have lives, too? Just like us?

One way or another, we bond with them, and whatever happens after graduation, there's at least one teacher—but probably more—that we'll remember fondly.

TIME TO WELCOME THE
NEW PRINCIPAL

If Tantasqua' s new principal, Mr. Steven Bliss, had it his way, most students would stay long after the 2:02 bell for music, sports, clubs, and other extracurricular activities. Long after the sun had set, the building would be bustling with activity. "A sign of a great school is when the campus comes alive," says Bliss, because then "students will try and do different things."

Bliss has certainly put a lot of time into his inaugural year at Tantasqua. He works from 5:00am to 7 or 9:00pm, and Saturdays too. There are stories about him: send an email at 3:00 in the morning, and you'll have an answer by 3:15. Still, Tantasqua's leader has hobbies he enjoys during his down time. He enjoys eating out at dinner with friends, clearing his head with a nice walk, or doing yard work. (Yes, he really did list yard work as one of his hobbies)

His reception has been principally positive, and most students are thrilled to have an administrator who "sets his mind to things and actually accomplishes them," as sophomore Miah Digregorio put it.

Bliss, who is new to the district, said that Tantasqua has either met or exceeded most of his expectations. He has found the students "extremely welcoming," and is "amazed, truly amazed, at the commitment beyond teaching."

Mr. Bliss quickly became noticed. He walked the hallways, made regular announcements on the intercom, and mailed monthly letters to students' homes. With such a firmly established presence, it'll be interesting to see what next year brings under his administration.

Pike Retires ...
TIME TO HUNT GRIZZLIES

Ask senior Mike O'Donnell what he was thinking all summer and he'll tell you: "Please, God, please let me have Mr. Pike for Spanish this semester!"

Mr. Dennis Pike, a Spanish teacher at our school, has been teaching for thirty-five years—nine of them here at Tantasqua. Earlier in his career he was an administrator at Belchertown, but he prefers teaching. "With teaching," says Mr. Pike (or, as his closer students call him, "Pique"), "I get the opportunity to shape young minds. Plus I get July and August off."

In addition to being a great Spanish teacher, Pique has studied four other languages: Greek, French, Portuguese, and English. However, he is most fluent in English and Spanish.

And while his polyglot intellect is dazzling enough, students love Pique because he will become a friend to you throughout the year. Plus, during down time in class, Pique tells bizarre stories that have happened throughout his lifetime. Sometimes most students don't even think they are true. But Pique says, "All the stories I tell to the students are true ... except for the ones about my wife."

There are hundreds of stories about Pique's fascinating life that he shares with his students. And that's the thing: in Pique's class, you don't just learn a foreign language; you also learn Life.

Unfortunately for Tantasqua, Pique retired from teaching after the 2006 winter term. Pique takes with him many memories of his teaching days, but says that his favorite memory at Tantasqua is when the old school building was up and you could walk outside to go from class to class.

So what's next for our intrepid Spanish teacher?

"After I retire from teaching, I want to go to Alaska and die wrestling a grizzly bear with a knife," says Pique. This is just one more example of another crazy story Pique will tell you.

And it's probably true.

Below: Is Mr. Pike teaching Spanish verb conjugations, or telling the story about the time he misplaced his friend's amputated fingers?

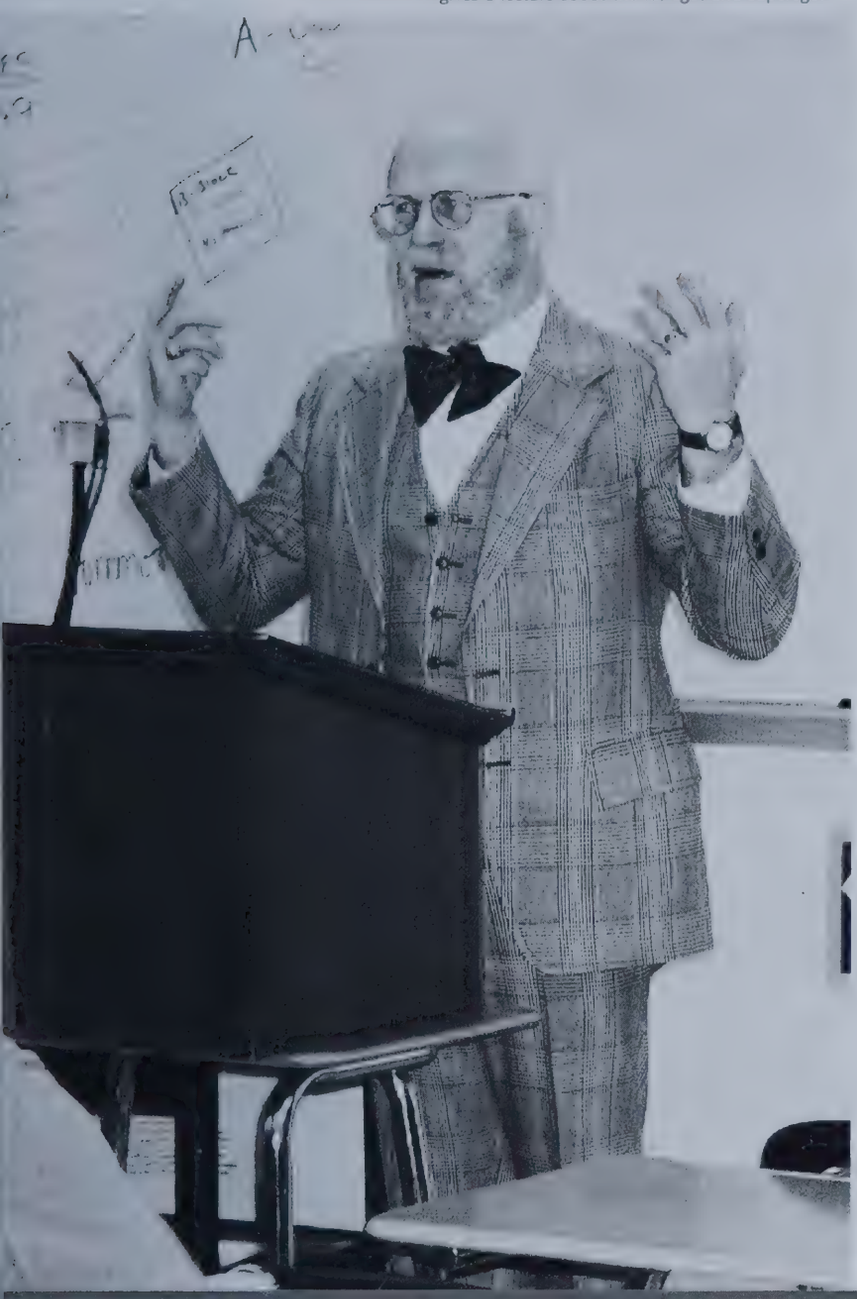
Below: Dressed as Sigmund Freud, Mr. Castendyk gives a lecture about the id, ego, and superego.



AFTER 38 YEARS ...

CASTENDYK RETIRES

It usually happens in between classes. The hallway fills with students and people begin to migrate from one side of the building to the other, bumping shoulders in the corridor. Then he is there, moving slowly with his cart full of lesson plans, activities and books. He gently nudges past students, a kind "excuse me" issuing from his smile. This is Mr. Christian Castendyk, the familiar, cheerful teacher who has dedicated much of his life to Tantasqua.

Mr. Castendyk works in the history department, of which he is the curriculum supervisor, and he teaching psychology classes. His last 38 years have been spent teaching—all of them within Tantasqua's walls. He has taught every type of subject possible, except economics.

Taking a class with Mr. Castendyk is almost like going on an adventure. If we are learning about child development, we bring in young siblings or friends to test their deductive skills. If we study the unconscious, we delve into a world of hypnosis, testing the limits of the unconscious mind. No lesson is ever brought to an end without a clear point being made.

The thing he enjoys the most about teaching is, in fact, the students and his interaction with their lives. He says that the students keep him young, and what scares is the idea that, in retirement, he might lose that feeling.

And, sadly, this year Mr. Castendyk does indeed plan to retire his long career at Tantasqua.

"I always said that I would stop teaching when it stopped being fun," he says. "The problem is, I'm about to retire and it's still my favorite thing to do!"

Perhaps that's why he plans to keep active in the field of education, hopefully helping out with literacy projects, mentoring new teachers, and getting involved with volunteer work. Meanwhile, we'll miss the sight of him here at Tantasqua, pushing his cart and smiling through the hallways.

there's always time for Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic ...

Tantasqua" is not just one word, not simply nine letters and three syllables smashed together to present a flowing sound. Tantasqua is a way of life, a part of who we are. It holds our clubs and sports and the people we care about it. It's where we spend our time, but as teachers are fond of reminding us, the purpose is academic and intellectual. And so you expect the usual classes: English, math, science, that sort of thing.

But sometimes, as you walk down the corridors and peer into the classrooms, you encounter some of the strangest sights: a psychology teacher dressed in full costume and make-up as Sigmund Freud, giving lectures to giggling students; a young man with a scalpel, cutting away at brain fragments in anatomy; a cluster of kids

Right: PJ Bouchard and David Howard look a bit maniacal as they conduct their experiment. The evil cackling will begin any moment!

Below Left: Shelby MacLeod and fellow AP students try to solve the puzzle of Hedda Gabler: baby-hating psycho, or victim of the patriarchy? (We say both.)

conducting a Shakespearean play; or maybe a group of students wearing USS Massachusetts hats, waiting to board the bus to see an out-of-commission war vessel.

Sure, the days can sometimes seem monotonous, but the goal is always within reach. And you know, four English classes and three mathematic, social, and science classes will ultimately get you to graduation. You get to know the teachers and they know you, it becomes more of a family, whether you would like to admit it or not. There are conflicts, but there are good times as well.

You tend to get lost it in all, not realizing that each class leads to the next successive class and whether you choose standard, college prep, honors, or the ever painful AP classes, you take it one step at a time.

Above: The great thing about environmental science: it gets you out of the building. And into a river.

But there's more than the basics. Look around, and you'll find students wearing nurse's scrubs; students wielding hammers and power tools; students balancing trumpet cases with their backpacks; students in chef's uniforms, taking orders from guidance counselors and teachers on lunch breaks; students holding pruning tools, leaning over plants and flowers in the greenhouse; students gazing at the sloping hills across campus, paintbrush poised over canvas; students editing film or assembling digital video or reading words off a teleprompter. All of this is part of the curriculum, too, part of the experience offered in our four years.

Some people say that high schools are machines, churning out the product of educated citizens, but for many of us, Tantasqua is a culture. Sure, our school "offers an education," but even if you never signed up for a single extra-curricular activity, there's a lot to do every day, when class is in session.

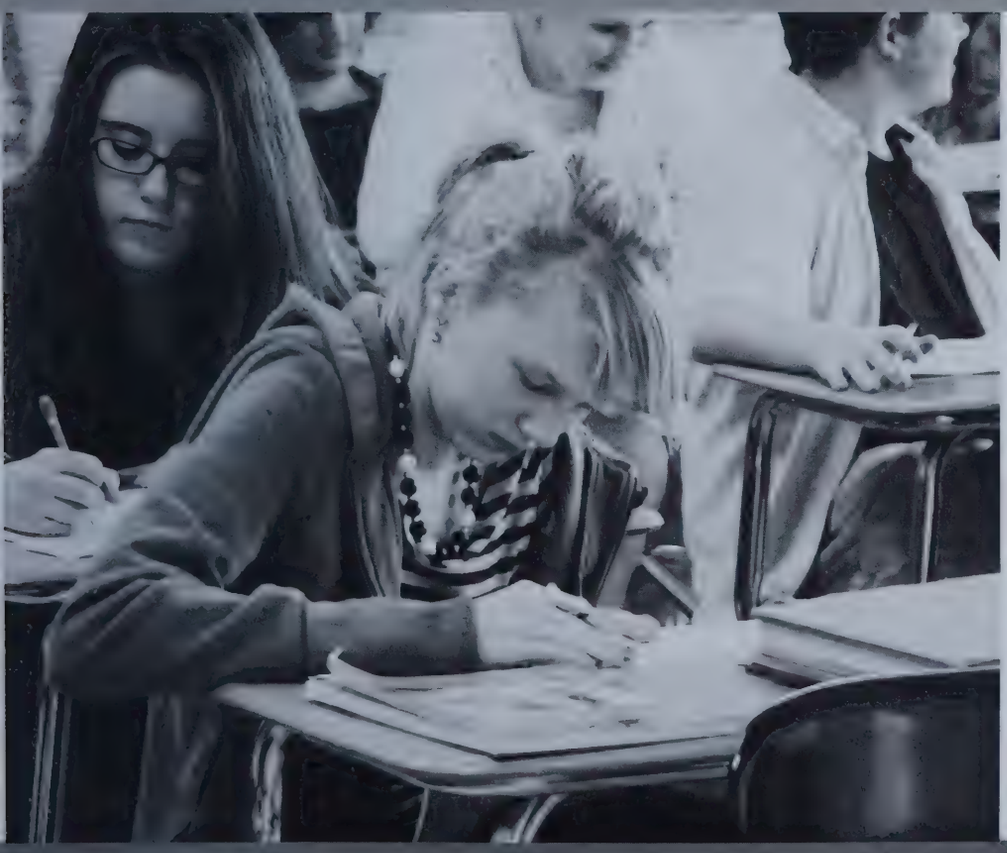
Maybe it doesn't seem that way when you've flunked your third math quiz, or bombed the most recent essay assignment, or turned out a lopsided piece of pottery. What becomes familiar is taken for granted, and maybe we forget that Tantasqua prides itself on the diverse learning experience it offers each student that passes through its doors.

So be it. School is short leg of a long a journey, and it can be perceived any which way you prefer—enthusiastically, sluggishly. Despite the position you maintain, from freshmen orientation till the moment your diploma rests firmly in your grasp, Tantasqua keeps us on our toes, hop-scotching from course to course. Hopefully the "real world" will be this good to us, too.



Left & Above: Sometimes, you have to take a quiz or write an essay; other times, you have to listen to a lecture.

time to save a life ...

Allied Health

Left: Jolene Paradis checks some equipment at an off-campus facility where she and other Allied Health students learn how to take care of patients.

Above: What's this? A student in a wig, pretending to be a patient? Well, the fake patients can only teach you so much. Sooner or later, you have to practice on a live one.

Left: At the hospital clinic, students learn to use a lot of different equipment. The environment is authentic, and the experience is valuable to students who want to pursue a career in medicine.

The young girl in the waiting room has a fractured wrist. The man in the emergency room is complaining of chest pains. A woman in cardiac arrest is rushed by on a stretcher, surrounded by nurses and doctors who make a team effort to save her life.

Patients come in all different shapes and sizes with any number of problems. It is up to the staff of the hospital or clinic to care for these helpless people as best they can. For the nurses, it can be a very stressful, nerve-racking, even scary experience. And that's with certification and practice in nursing. Imagine what it's like for students, in particular those who take part in the Allied Health Program of Tantasqua's Technical Division.

These students are bused to a hospital clinic every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, where they shadow certified nurses and get experience with different situations concerning actual patients. Depending on the area of the clinic they are shadowing, the students sometimes get a chance to practice their own skills on patients. They rotate through departments such as radiology, social services, pediatric care, emergency room care, and pharmacy.

It's not easy to do, and can be pretty intimidating working with real, living patients. Senior Jennifer Kantor feels like a nervous wreck when she goes to the clinic. "You don't know what to expect,"she says. On the other hand, Senior Lauren Moore said at first she feels nervous, but after a while she's fine.

Once over the nerves, the students enjoy taking care of patients and watching nurses at work. Senior Erin Moore likes to take respirations. "The patients don't know you're doing it and you ... watch them breathe." Kantor, meanwhile, prefers hair and nail care; she likes helping the patients feel refreshed.

The Allied Health Program is open to any student who wishes to pursue a career in a medical field. It prepares students for employment or further education in health care. The curriculum includes anatomy and physiology, disease control, nutrition, home health care, common health problems, ethical/legal issues, environmental safety, and other topics. The program offers American Red Cross certification training and prepares students for certification as nursing assistants and home health aides.

TIME TO PLACE YOUR ORDER AT

THE CORNERSTONE CAFÉ

At the far end of the first floor, where most students never wander, the Cornerstone Café is neatly tucked away. It isn't open to students, but nearly every week, faculty and staff—and community members, too—wander down to the tables and chairs that overlook the brick courtyard at the front of the school. They are waited on by students, served food prepared by students, in a café atmosphere created and maintained by students.

No wonder the Culinary Arts program is one of the most popular programs in the Technical Division at Tantasqua. This isn't pot luck or picnic food: at the Cornerstone Café, students cook for a menu that varies from salads and sandwiches to salmon and roasted turkey.

The response to this simple yet wonderful concept—an in-school restaurant run by students—has been phenomenal. There have been many write-ups and favorable reviews in local papers, and Café regulars are loyal fans.

Meanwhile, students in the Culinary Arts program are learning to prepare the food they serve, and how to run a small restaurant. They plan the meals, prepare the food, wait on customers, clear tables, and clean the kitchen. The experiences they are gaining are invaluable in the field of culinary arts. Students in the program are learning to cook and also learning the importance of presentation. They are the students of today and the chefs of tomorrow.

Now, if only there was a way the Cornerstone Café could accommodate student customers!

Right: Better turn up the heat! Lunch starts soon, and pretty soon hungry faculty members will be placing orders to have delivered to their rooms.

Above: Flouring a pan up to prep something good, Kelli Earnest is a key member in the culinary staff.

Right: Watch out! It's a large bowl of ... something delicious. But there's nothing worse than spilling the ingredients when you're just about to put it all together.

Left: One of the best things about being enrolled in the culinary arts program? The uniform.

FROM THE SNACK SHACK TO HAITI ...

CARPENTERS CHANGE THE WORLD

Below: When you work with wood all day, you're bound to get a little sawdust on you. Or a lot.

This year, Tantasqua's carpenters welcomed a new teacher, Mr. Stephen Mucha. Seventeen students from the Class of 2009 joined Carpentry in 2006, and the boys and girls in the program worked on many on-campus projects: saw horses, the snack shack, a pump house, and a shed. Finish carpentry projects this year also include hall poster frames, tool totes, and most of the props for the school play, including a working shower.

By the end of the year, most of Tantasqua's carpenters will have completed the OSHA Construction Safety and Health course.

This year, students have worked on projects atypical of the program, including a community service project for Haiti named Project HOPE ("Helping Overcome Problems via Engineering"). The project makes therapy chairs for children in Milot, Haiti. Mr. Timothy Seguin and a student co-presented Project HOPE at the 2006 MassTec conference.

Also, Burgess Elementary's preschool obtained a playhouse that was built as a student project. The juniors and seniors had the unique opportunity to help set up and dismantle the Western Mass Home Show, held at The Eastern States Expo this spring.

All in all, it's been another busy year for our hammer-wielding tech students!

Above: Two students stand from the rafters of the shed, one of the many ongoing carpentry projects made by many Tantasquans.

IT TAKES TIME TO MASTER ...

COMPUTER TECH

Sorcerers have their magic wands; the Computer Technology Department has its PCs. The students work their magic whether it is training for the MOUS (Microsoft Office User Specialist) and A+ PC Technician certifications, upgrading and configuring PCs, troubleshooting and maintaining PCs and peripherals, networking, or creating web pages. The students have a successful printer cartridge and cell phone recycling program.

They also provide tech support for some of the district's elementary schools and have created a community service project to upgrade donated computers and redistribute them to families without computers in the community.

The goal of this program is to prepare students for the A+ Certification Exam, which is an industry standard in the field of computer repair technology.

In Computer Technology, students perform on-site repairs to computers and troubleshoot them while being prepared for a job in any number of computer fields. Over 1,000 hours of class time are spent over two years expanding and solidifying the students' knowledge of computers and information technology.

Below: What's that Tyler Bradley is using? A ... pen and paper? How technologically quaint!

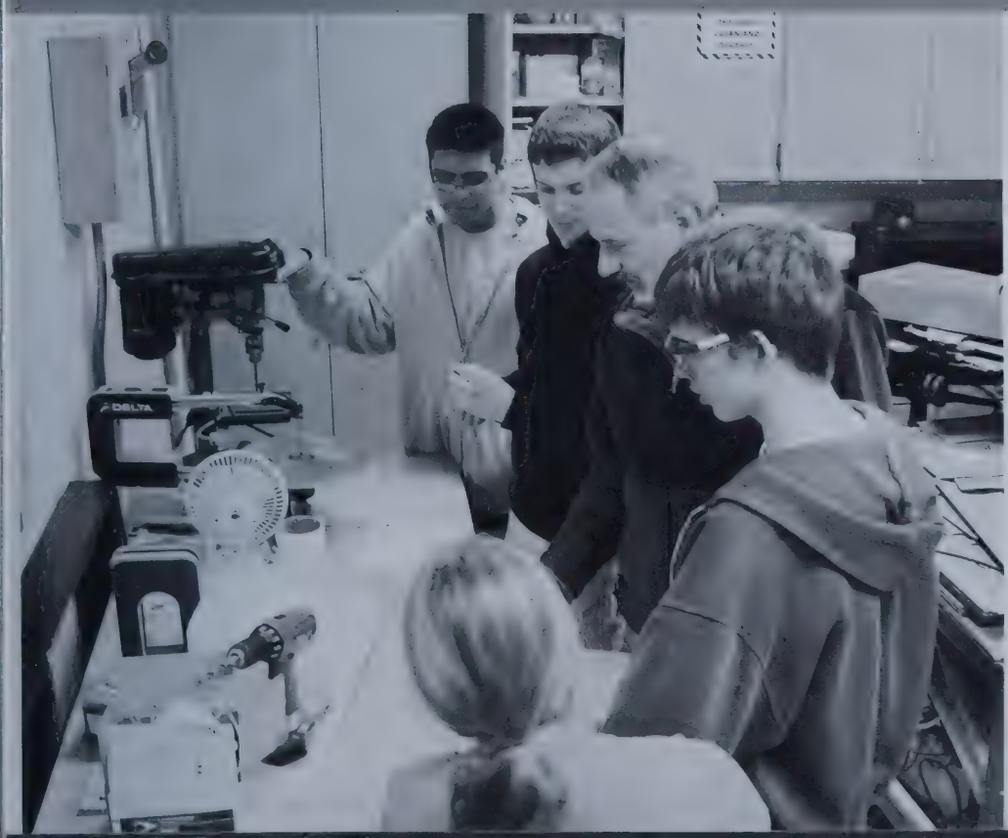
Left: Such concentration! Kyle Pellicane is either fixing a computer problem or else ... playing a game of pocket tanks?

Below: Students in the computer tech program consult with each other and offer helpful suggestions.



Above: Mr. LaBallee offers some professional insight into the process of CAD drawing.

Everything we wear, use, drive in, walk on or in, started out with a drawing. Someone thought of it, designed it, and drew it. Computer Aided Design (CAD) covers that area in all industries. Large companies have CAD departments, and small companies may have an engineer or other technician completing CAD drawings and performing other duties. Tantasqua's CAD/Drafting program can help students prepare for many careers and higher educational opportunities:

Civil Engineering: Roads, bridges, drainage systems, dams, preparation for large buildings.

Mechanical Engineering: All the mechanical things we live with, cars, microwave ovens, planes, metal chairs, computer cases.

Architecture: Designing and drawing homes, schools, hospitals, sky scrapers, and other buildings.

Engineering and architectural students may choose to enter college in pursuit of an associate's degree, a bachelor's degree, or a master's degree. Another option would be to obtain an entry-level position as a CAD drafter/operator right out of high school. As long as we design, build and make things, engineers and CAD operators will have opportunities for employment.

TIME TO DESIGN THE WORLD ...

COMPUTER DRAFTING

TIME TO PLUG IT ALL IN ...

ELECTRICITY MATTERS

Below: The vast board of outlets and wires is probably the most memorable landmark in the machine shop room. How do they keep track of it all?

While other technical programs at Tantasqua focus on the development and application of technology as a creative force, the electrical program teaches students how to work behind the scenes, powering the technology that is so essential to the future.

The Electrical Department at Tantasqua prepares each student to continue his or her education or to become an apprentice to an electrician.

As sophomores, the students spend one fourth of their day in either the electrical classroom or shop, learning the basics of electrical theory and installation.

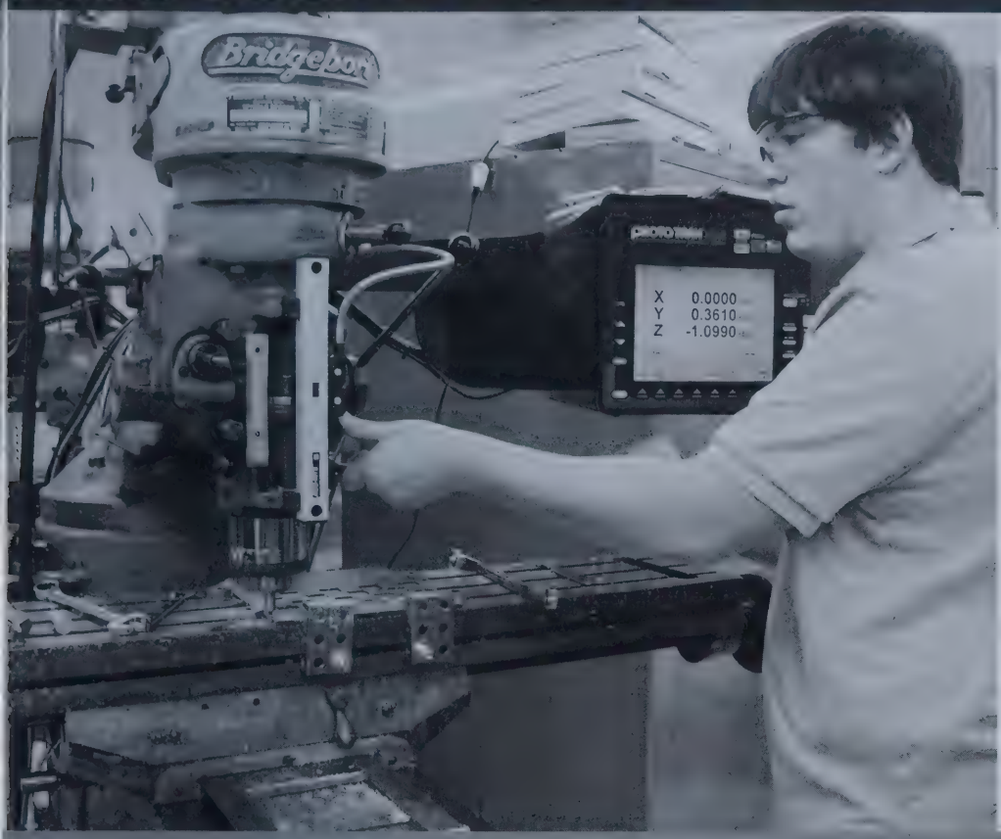
As juniors, they spend half their day in electrical, strengthening the basics and learning residential and commercial wiring practices.

Finally, as seniors, the students spend three fourths of their day in electrical, either in the community at the off-campus wiring project, in the classroom becoming familiar with "The Code," or in the motor lab, where they learn industrial wiring techniques.

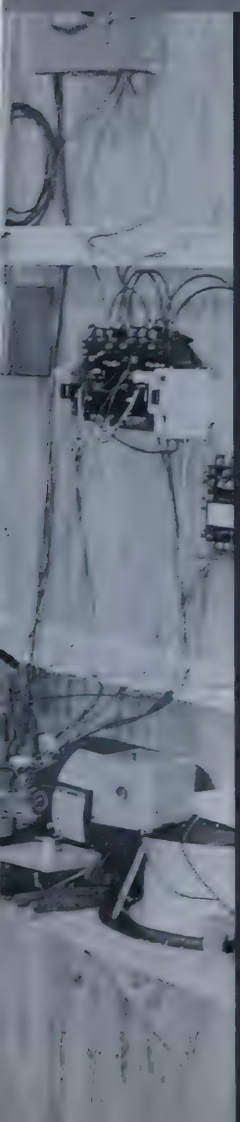
Above: This is most likely the worst part about machine shop. You know, actually doing bookwork.

Right: Mike Gelinas carefully handles the wiring on the board.

Below: You don't dare glance away when handling a machine this large and powerful, even when someone's got a camera in your face.



Below: A student turns some knobs and dials. Whatever else they do, they sure make you look cool.



Above: Measuring within a thousandth of an inch, it's important to get the details just right.

Would you like a career that requires precision within a thousandth of an inch (.001")? Could you handle it, or would the stress of near perfection make you throw in the towel after a week?

Machinists deal with details so small, other people would think it would not make a difference, but it does, especially when it comes to jet aircrafts, nuclear reactor parts, food processing machines, and parts for school buses.

Machinists have unique skills and knowledge that allows them to do things no one else can. A professional life of detail, highly accurate tolerances and strict deadlines create an individual with character, sincerity and honor. An industry of high standards means only the best are competitive, and only the most disciplined stay the course. Tantasqua's Machine Technology Program prepares students for a career full of tough challenges and high rewards.

THIS TIME AROUND ...

NOTHING STOPS THE WARRIORS!

This year, like no other before it, has been the year to be a Warrior's fan. In the 53 years since the five towns came together to form Tantasqua High, nothing like this has happened before, and some fans wonder if they'll live long enough to see it happen again.

We're referring, of course, to the boys' basketball team, with its historical run at the State Championship title. Every week, as students shuffled around their desks, listening to the morning announcements, the news was delivered: another victory. And then another. And then another.

Buses were chartered to carry fans to the away games. More and more fans filled the stadiums. The games were tense, nerve-wracking, cathartic. And in the end, the boys took home the trophy.

It feels good to be a champion, and as all true Warrior fans know, the boys' basketball players weren't alone in this year's seasons of sporting events. Other athletes earned remarkable praise as well. Senior Katie Twarowski won the first ever Southern Worcester County League Girls Golf Championship. The cross country team won the SWCL Championship meet. Individual athletes broke records, pushing themselves harder and harder at each game, each meet, each tournament.

And it paid off. School spirit soared. The cynicism with which former pep rallies were greeted declined. People buzzed in the hallways, speculating about the outcome of Friday's game, making plans for post-game dinners, debating the odds against the upcoming challenger.

Yes, it was a good year to be a fan. But it was an even better year to be an athlete.

PERFECT TIMING ...
RUNNING THE COURSE

Below: Nothing is better than a run though around the foliage covered campus. Lauren Moore is ready to win this race on her home field

The air was cold and the wind hard as the runners lined up for the start of the Southen Worcester County League (SWCL) championship meet. In the girls' varsity rce, Tantasqua was represented by Lauren Moore, Katelyn Anderstrom, Danielle Cloutier, Hope Hopkins, Mandy Pote, Engle Torres, and Sarah Prizio. The boys' varsity team consisted of Nate LaRose, Chris Ross, Mark Symonds, Ethan Anderstrom, Drew Fuchs, Josh Mikkola, and Gabe Woolf-Sullivan.

The boys won the varsity competition by one point. Drew Fuchs and Gabe Woolf-Sullivan each ran and impressive 15:42.0. Tantasqua had an overall score of 74.

The girls, meanwhile, conquered with a score of 38. The first Tantasqua runner to come in was Danielle Cloutier, with a time of 17:55.6. Mandy Pote followed with a time of 18:35.1, and Katelyn Anderstrom had 18:44.7.

The girls' cross country team has now won their eighth straight season and will hopefully continue their rise to greatness. The boys have won for the first time in five years. Overall, things are looking up for Tantasqua Cross Country for the next few years. Every team did well at the SWCL meet, and it was a beautiful day for a race.

SPENDING TIME ...
SCORING TOUCHDOWNS

Below: An ominous moon appears over a night game. Playing at night was new to the football players, and they liked it.

The varsity football team ended the season 3-8, losing two games by one point. The season didn't end the way they hoped it would, and injuries were a big reason why. The team had planned on having a winning record, believing they had too much talent and potential to walk away with the record they had.

However, the games they did win were very exciting. For example, the David Prouty game went into halftime tied at 0-0 with both team defenses playing well. David Prouty scored a touchdown on the first drive of the second half, putting them up 7-0. It stayed 7-0 the rest of the half until the 4th quarter, when, with little time left the Tantasqua defense forced a fumble and recovered it, giving the offense one last shot to score.

The offense, led by sophomore quarterback Corey Lavallee, drove all the way down the field to the goal line with only seconds remaining in the game. Mike Cronin punched it in from the one yard line with seconds left, leaving the score 6-7.

At this point, Coach Powell decided not to go for the tie and instead go for the win. The play came in and the Warriors executed perfectly. Corey Lavallee rolled out looking for an open receiver, and, finding none, he did what he did best: tucked the ball and ran. Corey dove for the end zone, was hit by a defender, and did a complete flip into the end zone. The two point conversion was good and the Warriors won the game.

The Warriors also beat Bay Path 7-0 and Uxbridge 14-0.

The Warriors always managed to fight back and never give up. This was due to a great deal of leadership from the seniors. They worked hard in the off-season in the weight room and on the track. They worked hard in the practices and it helped win games. Seniors SWCL all-star linebackers Brennan Green, Mike Cronin, and Jeff Wessell will be missed.

Next year looks good, and the Warriors hope to come out of the season with a record that reflects their abilities.

RACING THE CLOCK ...

The Tantasqua boys' varsity soccer team has, in recent history, been a solid group. However, this year feels different. Not only are they respectable, they're a downright dangerous team, capable of pitching a shutout against any team (see Shepherd Hill, Southbridge, David Prouty).

This might just be the most well-rounded group we have seen Tantasqua produce. Count them: nine seniors with previous varsity experience. Sophomore goalie Blake Minchoff returns with a full year of starting experience under his belt, and fellow sophomore Dan Piascik has been impressive enough to earn the starting nod. Every single varsity player has seen playing time already this season, and it is obvious that there are no bench warmers.

The defense is an obvious strong point, boasting all three of the team's captains: Kevin McKearney, Jamie Batista and Kyle Pellicane. Senior Nate Fuchs rounds out the group, a collection of four returning seniors.

When asked, Batista didn't deny the strength of the back four, but felt inclined to add, "Blake cleans up our mistakes." Blake is, of course, the team's goalie, widely considered by his teammates to be a top-class player. "We have the best goalie in the league," commented midfielder Scott Adams, adding that other goalies are "not even close."

If they keep improving, this is a scary team to face at season's end. It has been argued that Leicester and Bartlett are in a league of their own at the top of the table. However, the Tantasqua squad that tied Bartlett 1-1 and lost to Leicester 0-3 was one that went into enemy territory below full strength. With the return of Scott Adams, Jesse Ferro and Matt Dunkum, it would appear that any midfield lag (a misleading use of the word because, in fact, they've been more than formidable) will soon see their end.

IN THE POOL

The pool area was bursting with green and gold as the Tantasqua Swim team began its fifth season. The team, alas without diving this year, was able to finish with a 4-4 record, 4-3 in their league.

Under the direction of new coach Molly McGuire, and Captains Tiffany Santilli and Jeremy Burnam, the team worked hard every meet, and saw many of their swimmers qualify for sectionals.

In the league meet, the team finished fifth, six points away from a fourth place finish, where they were last year The boys qualified two relays for sectionals and in addition, senior Albert Chua qualified for the 100 breaststroke.

Eight girls in three relays and a number of individual events also went to sectionals. Freshman Emma Lamothe had second place finishes in the 50 yard Freestyle and the 100 yard Backstroke. And in the 400 yard Freestyle relay, Jenna Tasse, Katie Sotar, Tiffany Santilli and Emma Lamothe finished third. The girls also qualified for states as well.

Bursting with spirit every meet, the team, while not always winning, was always having a good time. This year's nine seniors all tried their hardest this season, and it is hoped that those on future teams have as much success and enjoyment in the future.

MAKING HISTORY ...
WARRIORS ON FIRE

By now the Varsity Boys' Basketball 06-07 season is nearly impossible to describe in words, and if you don't know what happened, well, where have you been?

Even before the boys won the State Championship, they were breaking records. The team finished the season with an undefeated 20-0 record and received the honor of Southern Worcester County League champions. According to the Worcester Telegram and Gazette, the 06-07 Warriors are the first team to accomplish an undefeated season in SWCL history.

This season was unforgettable for the entire school community and especially all the players. The team was the buzz of the entire community, and enjoyed tremendous fan support. One example of the devotion of Warrior fans was the Milford game, when the school provided three fan buses to travel to Milford to cheer the team on. As the game went underway, the Milford gym was packed full of both Milford fans and the Tantasqua fans who came on the fan buses. The crowd noise was electrifying as both teams exchanged blow after blow to each other. The Warriors were up most of the game, led by Junior Brian Vayda's 29 points and Senior Terry Peretti's 14 points. Senior Andrew Kazanovicz was in foul trouble most of the game, but had key baskets late in the contest.

The game was close the whole way, as the Warriors led by 2 with 13 seconds left. Milford fouled Junior Jon Kazanovicz and sent him to the line. Kazanovicz missed both free throws, but stole the rebound from a Milford player and was fouled immediately. Vayda calmly hit both free throws with 5 seconds left to seal the victory. The game was over and the Warrior fans stormed the court cheering and lifting Vayda in the air.

Overall the 06-07 Boys' Varsity Basketball Season was exhilarating for the fans and the players alike. The dedication and support of Warrior fans was incredible, and has made a lasting impression on the entire team and community.

STATE CHAMPS

All along, fans will tell you, there were big games this season. Games worth taking a bus to go see, just to cheer on the Warriors and watch some great basketball. Milford. Bartlett. Hudson. And then there was St. Bernard's, and a District title. And then South Hadley.

And finally, of course, Catholic Memorial.

On March 17, 2007, nine fan buses delivered over seven hundred fans to the DCU Center, where they cheered on the Warriors until weak and hoarse. And, as everyone knows by now, the Warriors pulled through with the State Championship title. This was it: the greatest game of them all.

Outstanding moments? Too numerous to count. This, after all, was the game where Andrew Kazanovicz shot the 1,000th point of his high school hoop career. This was the game where veteran team leaders like Terry Peretti and exciting young newcomers like Brandon Forcier shot decisive foul shots. This was the game where the cameras flashes popped and sparkled like meteor showers. This was the game where history was made.

With a final score of 64-58, the Warriors did more than defeat a challenging opponent and earn a State Championship. In the end, the boys held a perfect season record, and the thing was, you knew they deserved it.

"We fight back and we never give up because our team has a lot of heart," Brandon Forcier told reporters after the game.

And that, perhaps, is the real story here: the Warriors are all full of heart. How did they achieve their success? Hard work. Character. Practice. Determination. Camaraderie. Spirit. Fans. All this went into the great games of the season, but what fans learned, watching them, was that the boys themselves are great people, and their victory is all the sweeter for it.

Above: Andrew Kazanovicz stretches high to reach the ball at the opening tip-off of the State Championship game. This was the first time in Tantasqua history that the boys made it all the way to the DCU center.

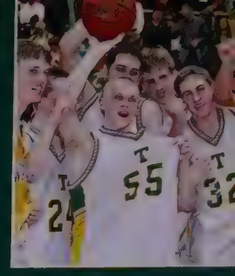
DISTRICT CHAMPS



This, people said, was the kind of basketball game Hollywood makes movies about. All the ingredients were there: Tantasqua, the season underdogs, hungry for a title they'd never won. Wild fans, hoping with the fever of a dream. A long, anxious game where the underdogs trailed behind and tied in the last two minutes.

And then, after 40 grueling minutes of play, with the team suddenly trailing again, a long, sweet, 3-point shot, so beautiful it practically happened in slow-motion, sending the game into overtime.

That's all the Warriors needed: a chance to take the game in overtime, where they defeated St. Bernard's, 74-73. Just a chance, and Ryan White, who made the shot, gave it to them.

"I couldn't describe it. I just got the ball and shot it. I was hoping it was going in and it did," White told the Telegram & Gazette. "I was so scared to make that shot, but I had the ball."

Of course, it was the team who put White in place, who gave him the ball, who trusted him to get the job done, because they and their coach, Jeff Child, knew he could.

The rest of the game was a wild cacophony of whistles, cheers, gasps. Terry Peretti was a blur on the court. Andrew Kazanovicz and Brian Vayda were unstoppable. And the fans were yelling, cheering, swooning.

Because this wasn't just a great basketball game. It was a story, a drama, an incipient legend, and everyone—every player, every coach, every fan—was a character in it.

RACING THE CLOCK ...
ROUND THE TRACK

Below: One hurdle down, so many to go!

The Boys' Indoor Track team, with a very successful season, went undefeated, winning the Southern Worcester County League title, and eventually coming in first overall in the Southern Worcester County League Championship meet.

The Girls' Indoor Track team had a great season, too, concluding it in 6th place in the Southern Worcester County League Championship meet. Both teams did very well ,with very much respect to their hardworking captains; Chris Ross, Kyle Diaz, Brennan Green, and Kevin McKearny for the boys and Kristina Foley, Lauren Moore, and Stephanie Kerber for the girls.

Also greatly contributing was the great efforts and support of first-year coach Steve McGuiness and the experience of Coach Green. Due to much hard work, pain, and effort, many athletes advanced to the District and State meets to compete at higher levels.

The Boys' Outdoor Track team was very successful, going undefeated throughout the season to win the league title, but coming in second place to Shepherd Hill in the Southern Worcester County League Championship meet. The Boys' Outdoor Track team ran, threw and jumped with much passion due to the intense coaching of the famous Fernando Gonzalez assisted by the winning experience of Coach Green.

The very young Girls' Outdoor Track team, coached by Mary Duane, had a winning season, concluding it with a 6th place in the Southern Worcester County League Championship meet. Both teams consisted of magnificent athletes and fierce competitors who, after much hard work, advanced to higher levels of competition, namely the District and State Qualifying meets.

TIME FLIES WHEN YOU'RE ...
HITTING HOME RUNS

Playing softball for the Tantasqua Warriors is a really wonderful experience. With head coach Mr. Lagerstrom and assistant coach Amanda Hawk, the girls start off their season each year at the end of March, and the season ends at the end of May. They practice every day after school from 2:00 until 5:00, working on hitting, throwing, and fielding skills.

"Tantasqua is fortunate to have batting cages where we can go in there and improve our hitting," said Erin McGrath.

"As part of the Tantasqua softball team, we're always working harder to get better, but we are always having a fun time," said another team member.

With Captain Heather Counyoer leading the warriors behind the plate, the other players are seniors (now graduated!) Leslie Carlson (who was injured for most of the season), Alicia Boone, Zora Angelie, and Becky Towns. The juniors (currently seniors!) are Lauren Moore, Jolene Paradis, Erin Moore, Sarah Curboy, and Kaileigh Keizer. The sophomores (currently juniors!) are Kim Hurley and Lauren Chagnon.

The girls played 21 games this past season, and although they only won five they beat their arch rival Southbridge twice this season. Those were two very proud wins for the Warriors this season. Most of the players are returning next season, and they are looking to improve the record.

For the 2005-2006 year, the girls had fun and an enjoyable season, and are willing to work harder next season.

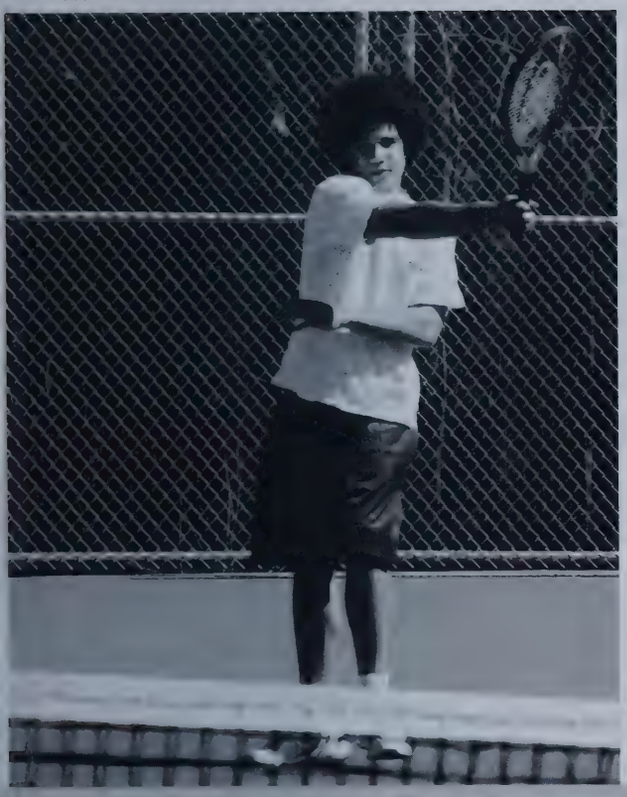
TIME CAN'T CATCH THEM ...
BEHIND THE NET

Below: Abram Cowell's pose is slightly awkward, but the look on his face says he's happy with the result of his swing.



Returning to the courts for the 2005-2006 season after a rebuilding year, Tantasqua Tennis once again showed its strength, winning the Southern Worcester County League. Led by captains Connor Neal (sophomore) and Chris Zini (senior), the team was nearly undefeated, suffering its only loss away at Shepherd Hill late in the season. Of the 19 regular season matches, the Warriors were 5-0 in 13 of them, an amazing accomplishment.

With all their successes, the Warriors' early-season win against defending SWCL champions Uxbridge gave the team confidence, and set the tone for the rest of the season. The team qualified for district play, helped in part by freshman Matt Mailhot, playing at second singles. Matt went undefeated in 2006.

The Warriors entered Districts, playing in Division I, but seeded second in the Central Division. They lost their first match, in the Quarterfinals, against Westborough.

Despite the loss, the match was one of the best the Warriors played all season. After being called for rain, the match was continued indoors in Westborough, where the Warriors almost pulled off a come-from-behind win.

Despite the loss, the team was still proud of its accomplishments, and of having played with 'class and integrity,' something constantly stressed by the team's coach Chuck Hamparian. The team was also proud of the fact that every player was able to start at least one match during the season.

Tantasqua Trailblazers

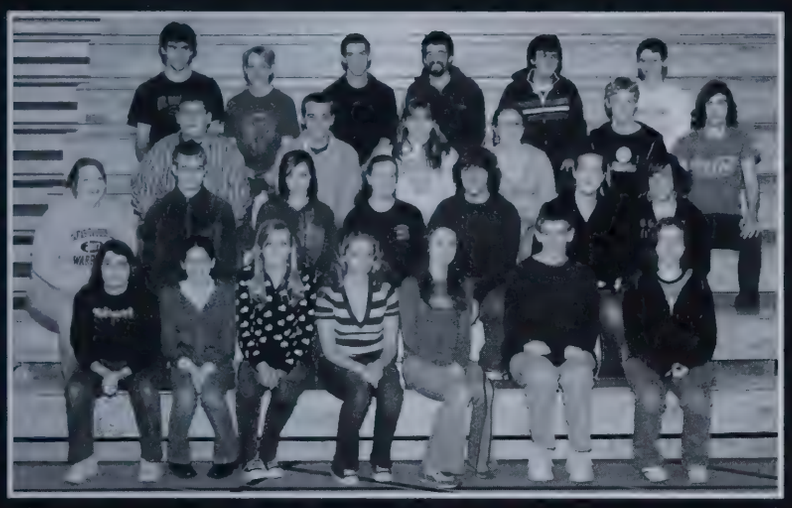
These students quite possibly have the most school spirit of all. They can be seen at every pep rally with flag held high.

Tech Prep Ambassadors

A group of academic and technical students alike that deal with tech based activities as well as tours of the school for all 8th graders, every year.

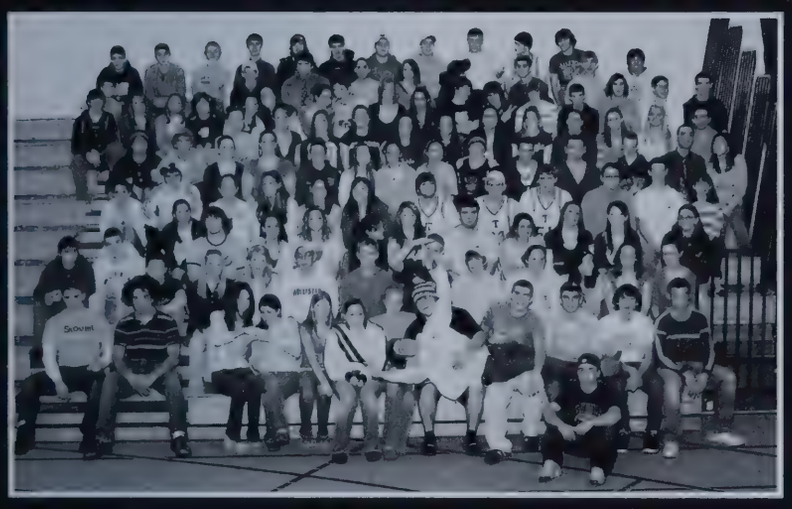
Thomas Jefferson Forum

Working heavily in community service, TJF meets often after school to discuss what's next.



Tomahawk

This year has brought back the Tomahawk newspaper to deal with all of the news for school, community and beyond. Publications can be found monthly or sooner for your reading pleasure.



Varsity T

A collection of all student athletes who have received their varsity "T" in accordance with their varsity sport.

Video Game Club

This club meets as often as possible to do just as its title would suggest: play video games.

Yearbook

To say the least, these are the people responsible for constructing and assembling this yearbook. Only through months of work and planning was this very feat accomplished.

Choraleers

Students who express great vocal talent and ability who stay and also travel, holding concerts to amuse and delight all who attend.

Concert Choir

With beautiful voices, the concert choir performs frequently throughout the year.

Concert Band

Players who perform during concerts and plays, usually on the sidelines but always heard and admired.

Jazz Band

A collection of jazz players who also perform at many concerts and collections, in jazz fashion.

Marching Band

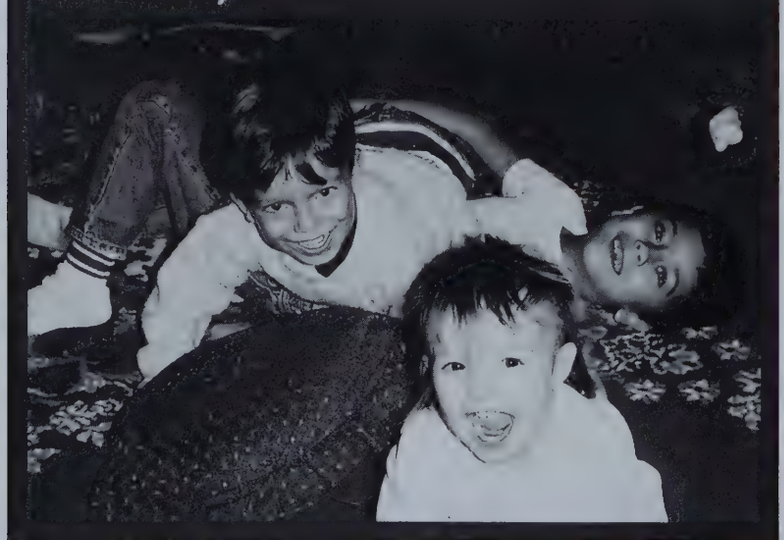
These are band members who are seen at many of Tantasqua's sporting events during half times and also pep rallies playing their hearts out to save school spirit!

South Pacific

Here are the students who put on the fantastic "South Pacific" musical earlier this year. Each and every one of them put it great time and effort to produce such work and the effect was superb.

Katie,
Follow your heart, follow your dreams, believe in yourself.
Thank you for the joy and laughter you have brought into our lives.
Always keep your sense of humor, your kind heart (and your ability to do voices).
We feel truly blessed that God made you a part of our lives.
We hope you know that our unconditional love will always follow you.
Love,
Mom, Dad, Lu-cee, Lu-ee

Jeremy,
You have been a joy from the day you were born into our family! All of your growing "pains" will prove to be your best lessons in life ... Your kindness, thoughtfulness, and maturity will help you realize all of your dreams. We couldn't be any more proud of you!
All our love,
Your Family



Tiffany,

You're everything we could have hoped for in a daughter and more. We are extremely proud of the person you have become and the accomplishments you have achieved. As you set out for new adventures, remember that we love you and we will always be here for you.
Congratulations!

Love,

Mom, Dad, & Tim

Jess,

From the day you came into our lives, you have brought us joy, love, and laughter. With your dance you have always taken the right steps forward. You have shown so many people how special you are and it's really possible to reach your dream. You are the person who can achieve the things you work so hard for.

You never gave up, even when things were hard. You are our dream come true and you have always made us so very proud of you. Always keep your dreams alive and follow your heart. You are our poo bear.

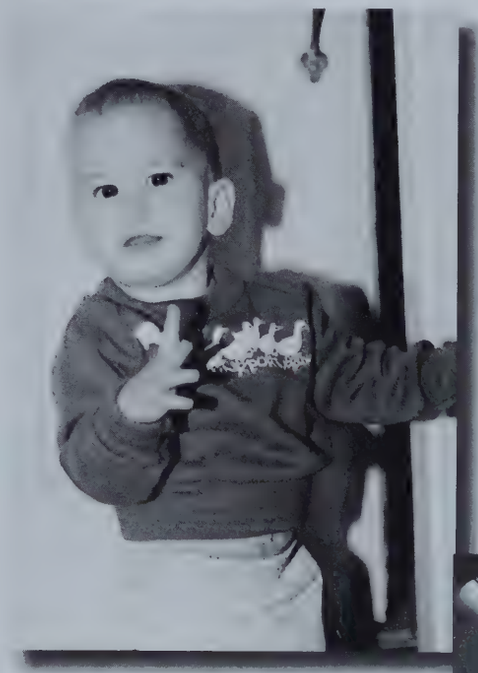
Love, Mom Dad, and Richie

My Darling Jessica,

From the baby who fell asleep on my shoulder as we danced, to the little girl that always wanted strawberries. The one who used a box of band aids a week sticking them on everything in sight and that became a phone messenger before she was three. You never stopped bringing me pleasure; my heart has always been so filled with pride and love for you, and you have never disappointed me. If you said something unkind as you grew into the beautiful young woman that you are, you always owned up with a sincere and heartfelt apology--that's what builds character. Jess not always being perfect but caring enough to be humble. I'm proud of the way you honor commitments, your sense of responsibility, your great sense of humor, and not only the respect you have for others but for yourself as well. I know you'll apply yourself in college as you have throughout your life and you'll accomplish your goals, for you'll give it your all.

May you have a healthy, happy, and prosperous life ... but not far away from me. I love you, ucca.

Love Gram



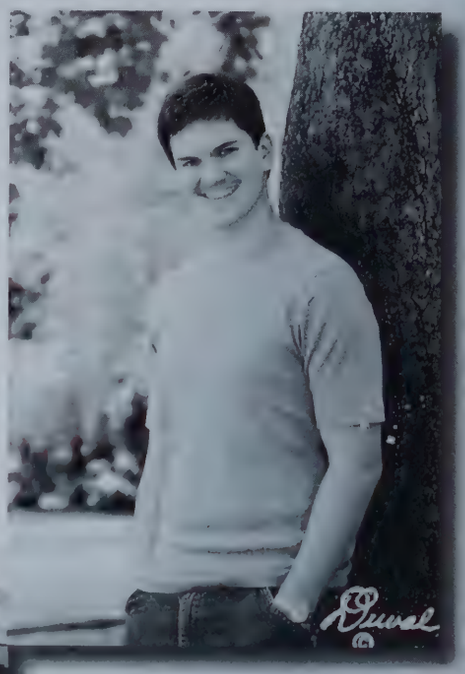
TO OUR SON

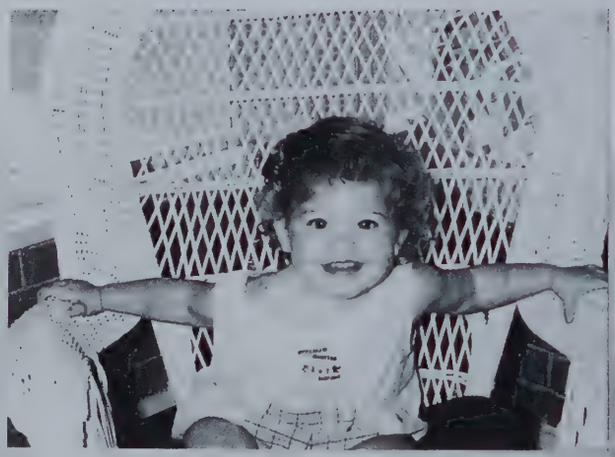
As parents we know we have experienced something wonderful, all the memories of watching you grow from our sweet baby boy into the fine young man that you are today. Full of hopes and dreams, we watch as you head down your path in life to reach your destiny. We will always be proud of you, no matter what you choose to do. Don't let anything stand in the way of achieving your goals.

Reach for the stars and make it happen!!

We love you very much,

Mom & Dad

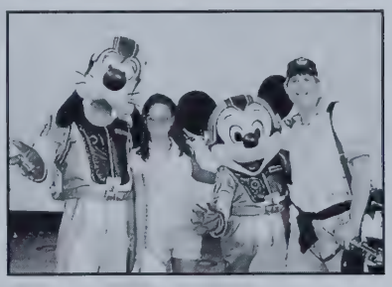


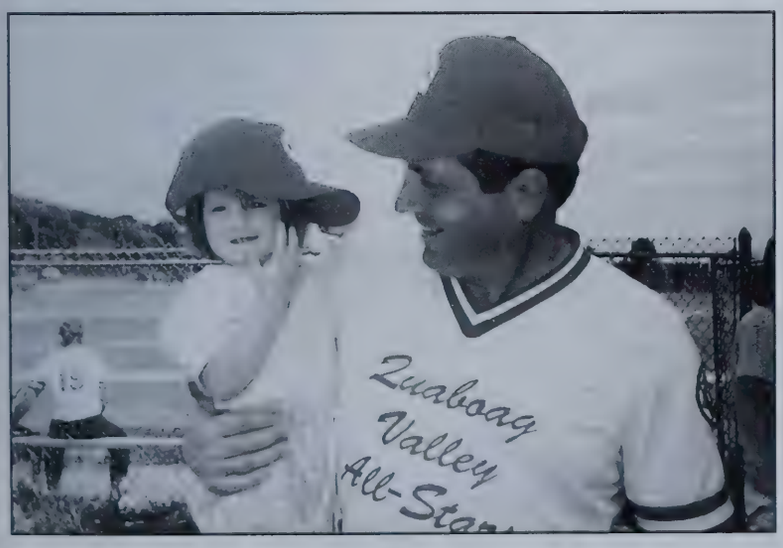


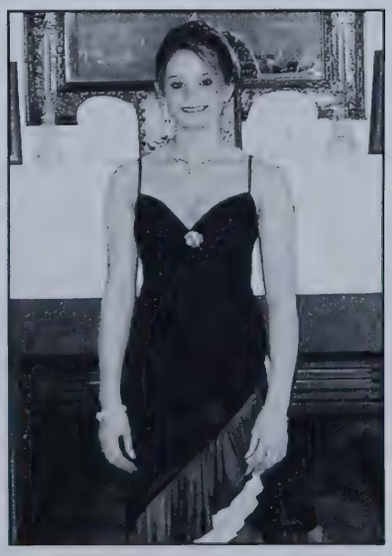
Andrea, We have so many fond memories of your childhood and we look forward to the memories that lie ahead. Best of luck to you in college. We Love You!
Mom, Dad, Steph and David

"Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things you didn't do than by the ones you did do. So throw off the bowlines. Sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover." -Mark Twain

Caitlin,
You are my gift from God. I am so blessed to have you as my daughter. Watching you grow has filled my life with so much happiness. I am so proud of the young adult that you have grown to be. You are beautiful inside and out, intelligent, and a very talented singer. Always have confidence that you can achieve anything in life that you choose and remember that we will always be there for you.
Love, Mom







Congratulations Lyndsay!

Your future lies ahead bright and full of promise.
God and your family are behind you all the way.
Go do wonderful and amazing things!

We love you!

Love,
Dad, Mom, and Matt

And may God bless you and the class of 2007

Kevin,
You have been such a joy to us, it's hard to know where to begin. You've always been able to make us smile, with your uninhibited sense of humor and ability to have fun. We are so proud of the strong, thoughtful, determined young man you've become, and all of your accomplishments. We know you'll make the right choices, be happy and follow your dreams. We will always be here for you with open arms and hearts.

We love you.
Mom and Dad

Kev,
What are you doing graduating?! I thought you'd always be my little kid brother, but I guess you grew up too. I have to say, though, I really like how you've turned out. I love how much we have in common and how much fun we have together. Now that we're older, you're more than my brother, you're also one of my best friends. I know there's always been a bit of competition between the three of us, but believe me, you should be very proud of everything you've accomplished. You have exceeded my hopes for your success in high school. You have my respect and I couldn't be more proud of you. I hope you know that you will always have my support and I'll always be here for you.

Love,
Your Big Sister

P.S. Do you guys just sit around up here...?

Kev,
You've always been my little brother, but now you're my friend too. As much as we didn't get along growing up sometimes, I'm glad to know it's completely turned around. You've always been the one with drive, Make sure that doesn't change anytime soon. It's going to do you well in the years to come, and if something goes wrong, I'll always be here for you.

Love,
Jeff

P.S. So, you ready for the porch...?

Dear Scott,

It's hard to believe that our youngest is ready to graduate and move on to the next phase of your life.

You have done it with class and humor. We applaud your achievements and are proud of the wonderful young man that you have become.

We love you and we are always here for you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Chris, Becca, and Todd

Katie, One way to get the most out of life is to look upon it as an adventure.

You are our Sweet Heart, Butter Cup, Angel Face, Forever. Love, Mom, Dad & Kyle

To Emma - our own little princess...may you take flight and soar. We're so proud of you!! Love Mom and Dad.

To our Precious Kristina
"Krissy"

You have built Stairways since you were a little girl, always finding a way to make things happen. You have successfully overstepped many obstacles. Your gentle spirit soars with you - your smile is a reflection of your Mother. She would have been so proud of you - sweetie - she loved you dearly. Your giggle - your gentleness brings us all joy. Auntie loves you!
May you spread your wings - soar above - find the path chosen just for you. Listen to your heart - it will lead you.
Your are one awesome daughter - sister - niece - friend. You have the traits, spirit & craziness of your Mom. You will succeed! Your intelligence and organization will get you where you need to go - You will never walk alone - your Guardian Angle in Heaven stays close beside you.

We are all so proud of you! We all love you so very much!
Dad, Amy, Auntie Sharen, Gramma Arlee and all your family and friends
XOXOXO

Dear Rachel,

17 years ago when you were born I never imagined that your would be the one person that could always brighten my days (good and bad) with just your smile. You have become a beautiful, intelligent, and caring young woman. How lucky your patients will be to have a nurse like you. I hope your future gives you as many happy times and wonderful memories as you have given to us.

Love Always,
Mom, Dad, Corey, & Shana

P.S. I love you Porkchop. Love Momo

TO PETER
Our Awesome Body-Builder

We are so proud of your accomplishments and dedication in everything you do.

We love you,

Mom, Dad, Lydia

Lindsay,

You are an amazing young lady, built of integrity, honesty, and in harmony with your personal values. You make choices on what you believe, and not what others believe. We find ourselves learning new things through your eyes everyday. Always listen to your inner voice, it is seldom wrong. God Bless ...

We love you,

Dad, Mom, and Michael xo

May You Live Every Day of Your Life

JEN

Good health, good friends, good times ahead.

with all our love,

All, Mom & Dad

Far away there in the sunshine are my highest aspirations. I may not reach them, but I can look up and see their beauty, believe in them, and try to follow where they lead.

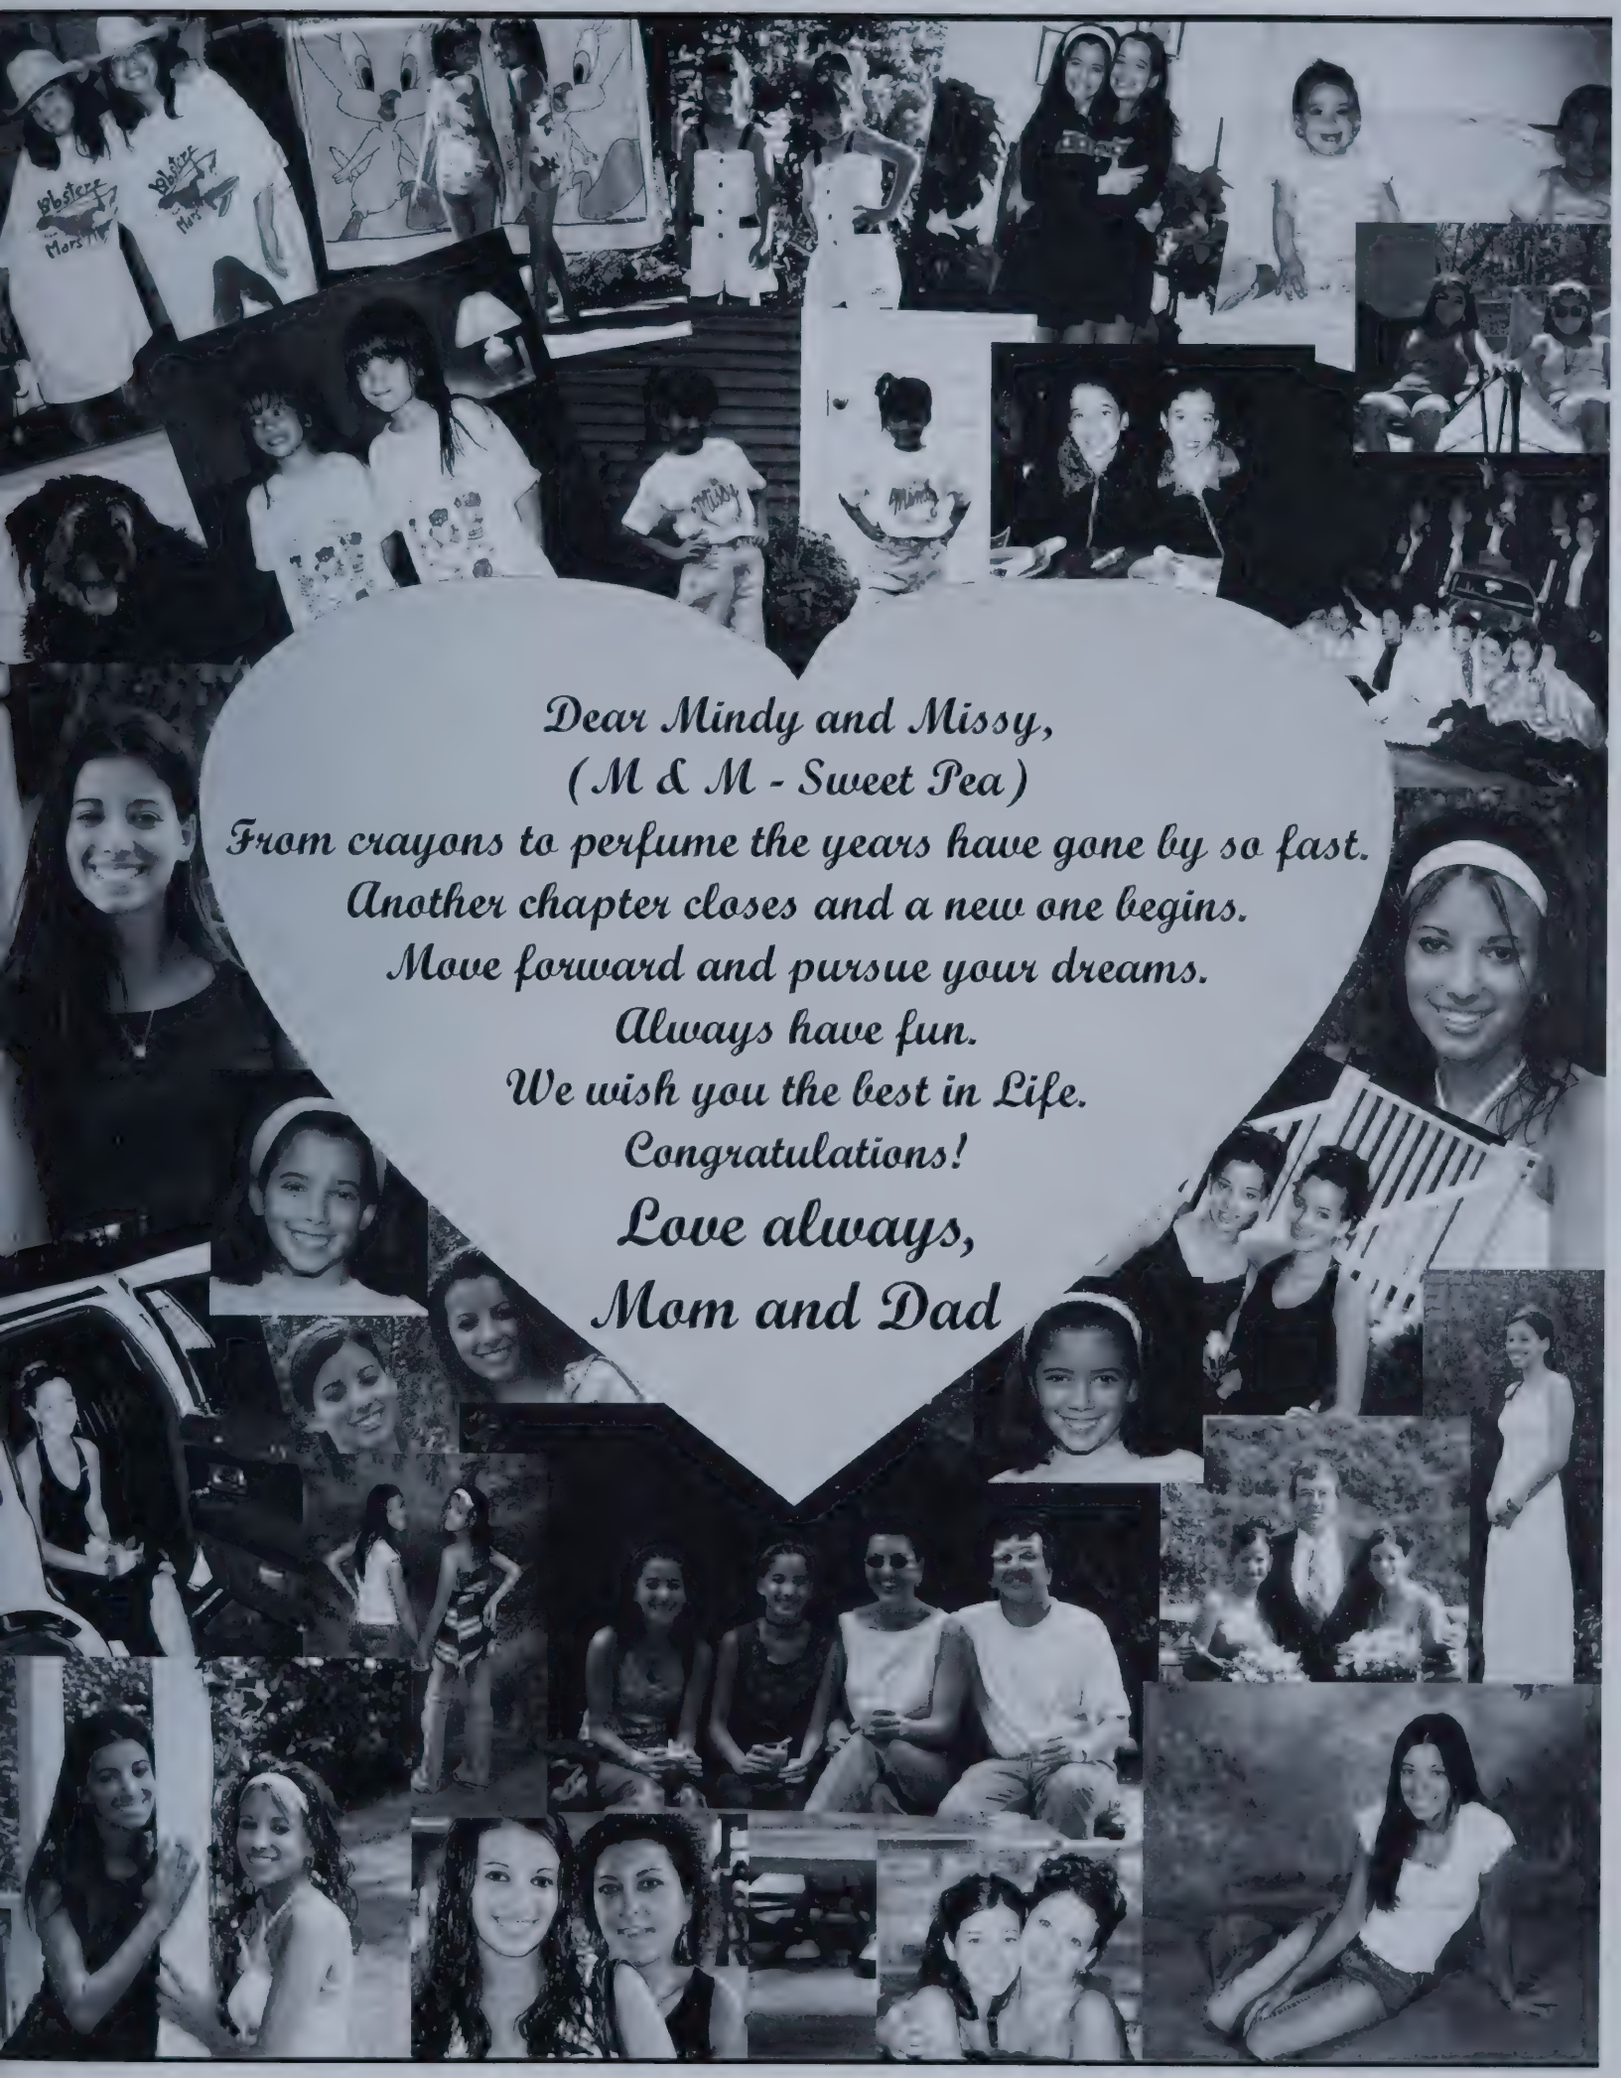
Dear Megan,

Follow your rainbow! May you always have music in your heart & soul. We are very proud of you. We love you forever.

Mom & Dad



Dear Mindy and Missy,
(M & M - Sweet Pea)
From crayons to perfume the years have gone by so fast.
Another chapter closes and a new one begins.
Move forward and pursue your dreams.
Always have fun.
We wish you the best in Life.
Congratulations!
Love always,
Mom and Dad

Sabrina, our daughter....
We couldn't be prouder of you. Not only of your accomplishments but, more importantly, of the wonderful young lady you have become. Your kindness, commitment, and respect for others will surely take you far in life. Congratulations on four fabulous years and good luck on your next adventure.
All our love, Mom and Dad

Sabrina, my sister....
You've been my best friend for 12 years and you've allowed me to be part of so many of your high school experiences.
I'm so thankful to have such a special sister, yet I'm a little sad to see you graduate..
I'll miss my best friend so much when you move on....so don't go far!
All my love, Julie

Liana,
Now is a time for you to celebrate ... the accomplishment of a dream you have worked so hard to realize. You have shown so many people how special you are.

Now is the time to begin to pursue the next path, to reach out for the next star, and to achieve the things that are important to you. Always keep your dreams alive, keep them coming true.
Love, Mom, Dad, and Jocelyn

Congratulations PJ!

From our little boy...

To a grown man we are proud of...

With much love and hugs,
Mom, Dad, Nette, and Joe

When we found out we were having a baby, we had dreams and expectations of how and who you would be. You have far exceeded anything that we had dreamed. As a Mom & Dad, we could not ask for a better daughter. Life is about making good decisions, so kick butt and don't look back!! We are so proud of you!!

Love, Mom, Dad, & Michael

Matt,

We are so proud of you.

Reach for the stars.

We love you.

Mom, Dad, Pat & Morgan

Kaitlyn,

You are loved for the little girl you were; the special young woman you are now; and the precious daughter you will always be. We love you and are so proud of you. We will alwyas be here for you. Always follow your heart, and never give up on your dreams.

Love,
Mom, Dave, Amber, Abby
XOXO

... GOOD MORNING YESTERDAY

WE WAKE UP, AND TIME HAS SLIPPED AWAY... DO YOU REMEMBER THE TIMES OF YOUR LIFE?

LOVE YOU, LAUREN

To Our Very Dear Sara Elise,

From the moment that we were heading to the hospital to have you, almost 5 weeks early, I knew you were my baby girl. You came into this world on your own terms with resilience and defiance, and yes... you were truly perfect! Now, you are a senior in high school! Where did the time go? We have watched you grow over the years into a beautiful young woman. We admire you for your self-confident and respectful nature. We admire you for your loyalty and protectiveness that you continue to show for your family and friends. We admire you for your honesty and for your compassion. We admire you for the fact that you will stand up and voice what you believe is right, no matter what anyone else thinks. But most of all, we admire you for your perseverance! No matter what obstacles life has put in your path, you have always managed to overcome them, even when the odds have been against you. As you close this chapter of your life and move on to the next one, we know that whatever goals you choose to pursue, you will achieve! Always remember to believe in yourself, follow your dreams, and most important, always remember to "live each day as if it were your last!"

We love you with all of our hearts,
Mom, Dad, & Chris

"Beautiful baby from the outside in Chase your dreams but always know
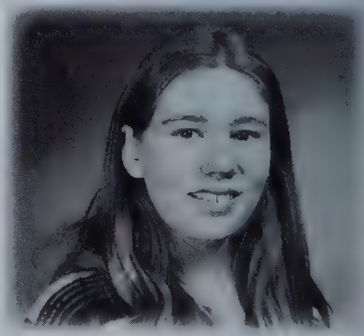
The road that will lead you home again
Go on...take on this whole world
But to me you know you'll always be my little girl!"
Tim McGraw

Dear Kelly,

Congratulations! I are so proud of you, and love you very much.

Love, Dad



My Kind Angelique,
As the magnificant tulip with all its sculptured layered petals: Angelique. Every one a layer you have yet to offer the world. The morals and loving heart you have chosen to use, being a second mother to you brothers will live on with them forever to become giving men. Stand tall, take a deep breath, walk with a wide stride, and smile with the pride and confidence of who you are. We send you off with all our love. Home will always be where your family is.
Love,
Dad, Mom, Francesca, Garrett, Harrison, and Chantelle

Dear Erin & Lauren,

We have watched you grow into two beautiful young ladies .... Continue to handle yourselves with grace and kindness. May your past be a stepping stone into the future, filled with love, hope and happiness.

Love, Dad, Mom, Ryan & Evan

SAGE,

THANK YOU FOR ALL YOUR HARD WORK, DETERMINATION, AND SUCCESS. WE ARE SO PROUD OF YOU!! CONGRATULATIONS AND GOOD LUCK.

Congratulations Steph!

From preschool through high school you have always made us proud. Remember the best is yet to come.

Love forever,
Mom, Dad, Dan, and Polly

Congratulations Boo-boo, younger sister to Jen and older sister to Kelli, Josh, and Nate Always remember all our memories: daycare on Stallion Hill, Disney World, Niagara Falls, Nana's house on holidays, and most of all our family times on Cape Cod. For these are what will see you through. You came into this world a tiny little thing, now you graduate from high school a confident, smart, beautiful, loving young woman. You go into the world with all the tools you need and no matter what you do, we all know you will succeed.

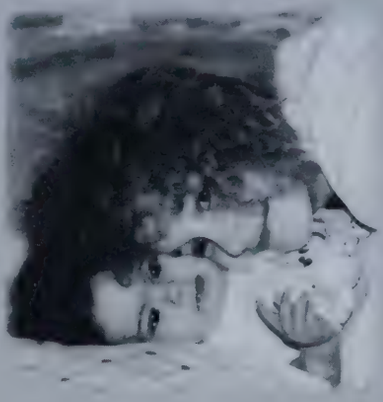
Love always,
Mom, Dad, Kelli, Josh and Nate.

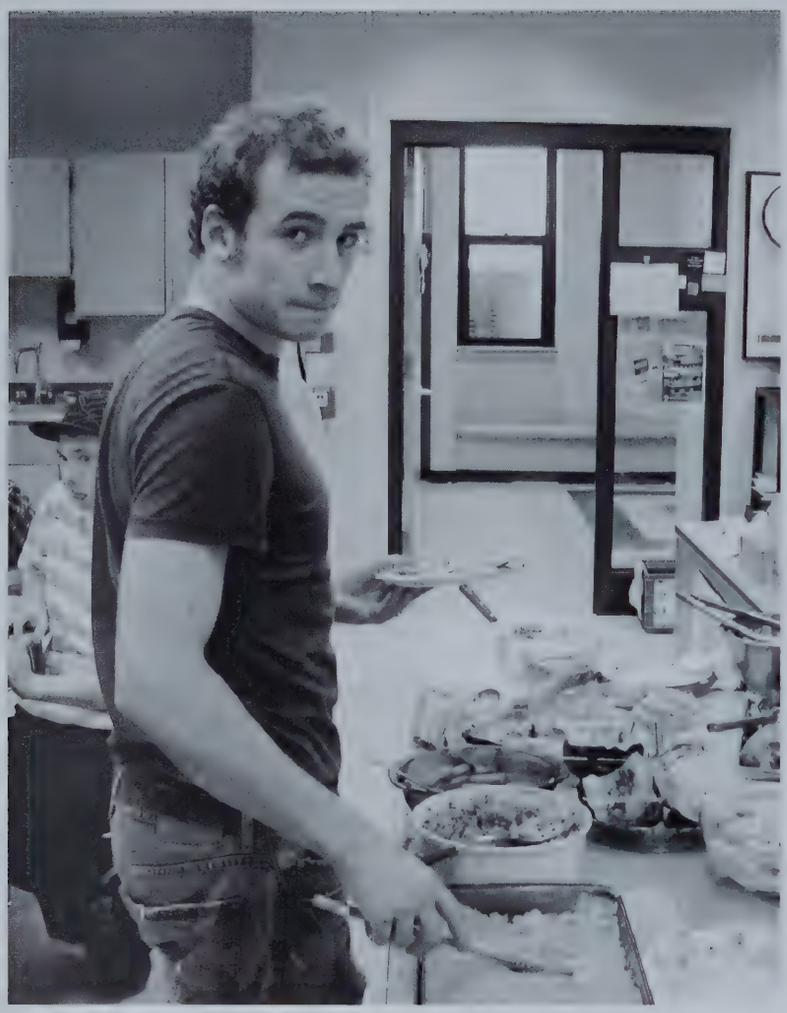


To my Bear, Boo-boo, Gangsta, and SB

The day you were born I knew I was getting the little sister that I always wanted. What I didn't know was that you'd end up being my very best friend too. I'm so proud of the smart, funny and wise beyond her year's woman that you've turned into. We've had the best times- Newport, the Cape, Sox games, girl's night in the PA and London. To think that's only 17 years worth of memories- there's plenty more to come!

We love you,
Jen and Adam

"My wish, for you, is that this life becomes all that you want it to,
Your dreams stay big, and your worries stay small,
You never need to carry more than you can hold,
And while you're out there getting where you're getting to,
I hope you know somebody loves you, and wants the same things too, that's my wish"



Joel,

"Dream big! Finding the courage to follow your dreams and laugh at your nightmares."

We are so very proud of you!
Love forever and always, Mom & Dad

Sarah,

From the very first day,
you have given us joy.

We have enjoyed every flower

every smile,
every hug,
every dance!

Now... as you change fields, and reach for new goals, we hope that...
"...it's a beautiful ride."

You have made quite a splash...

and grown up in a flash.

We Love You!

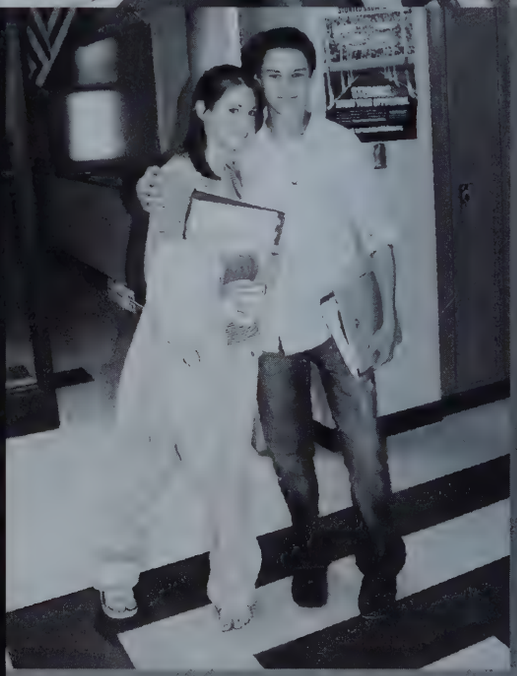
GO WARRIORS!



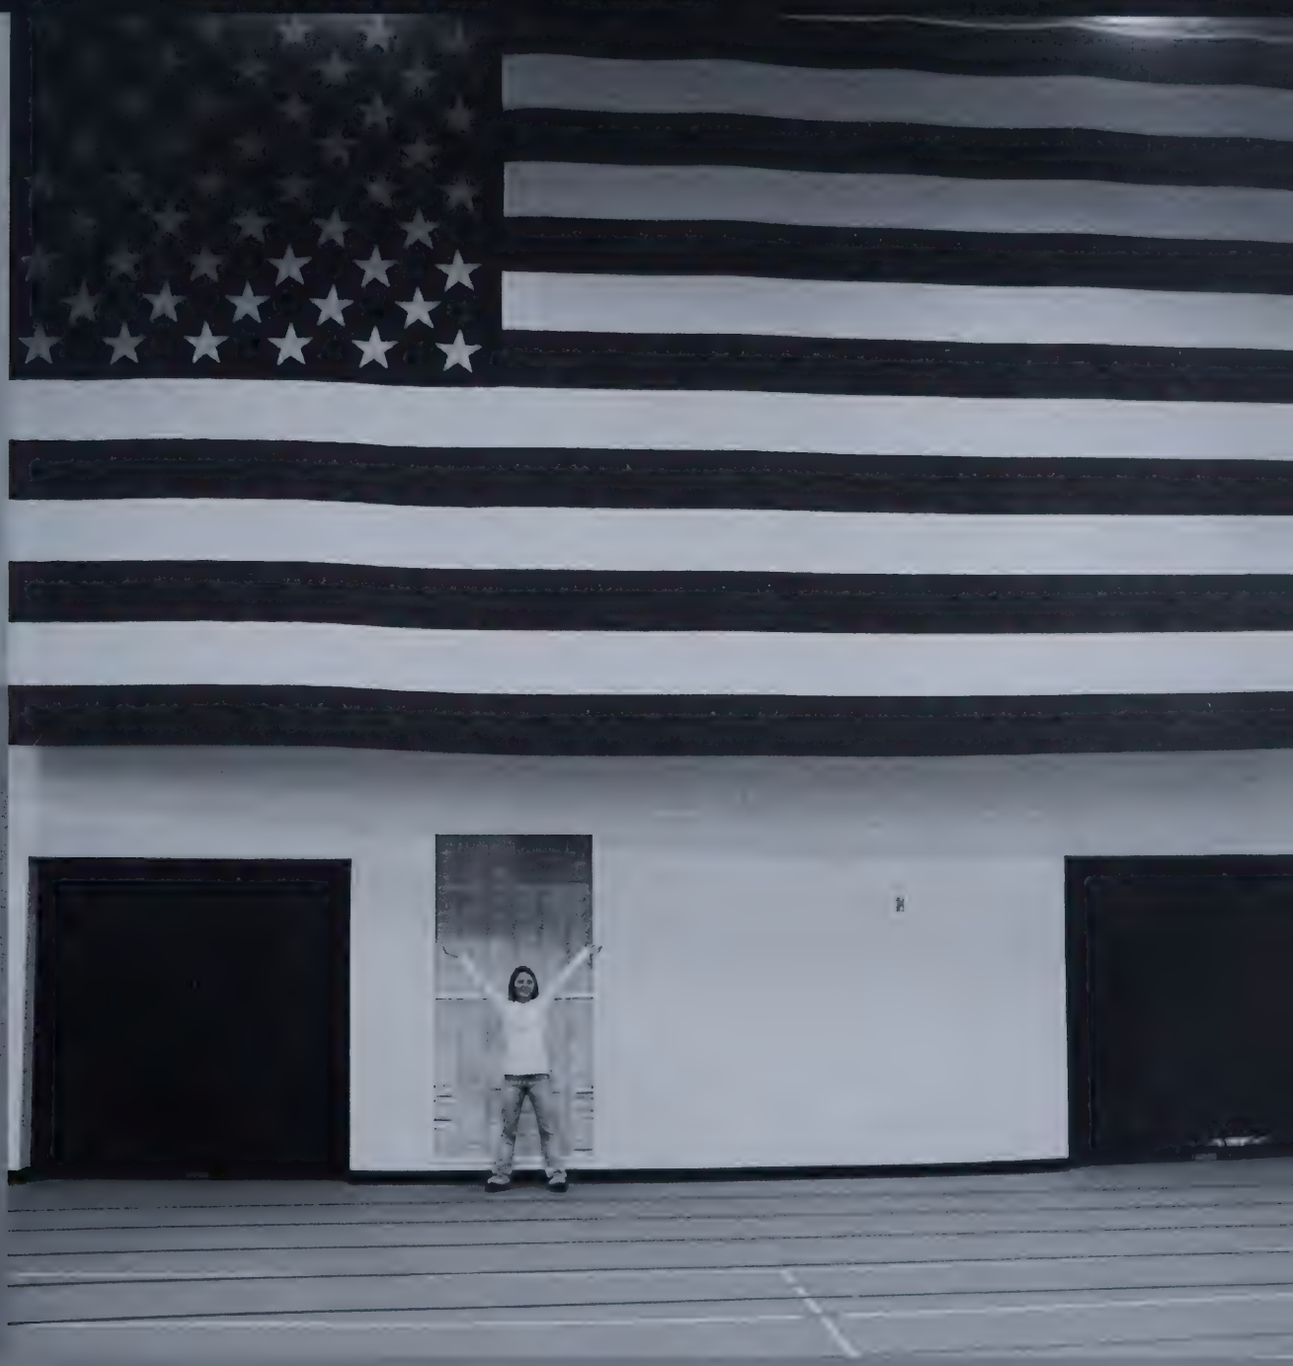
time slips into the future ...

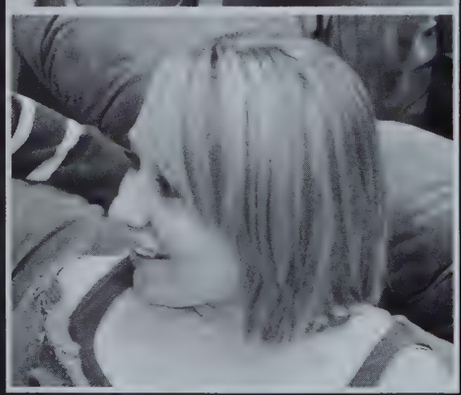
Time winds down. Time runs out. "The best of times, the worst of times." The time of your life.

It rushes by so quickly. One minute you're unloading textbooks into lockers whose combinations you haven't memorized yet; the next, you're scanning a new schedule of classes to see which teachers you have, or making plans for summer vacation—or walking onto a stage to receive your diploma.

There will be other milestones, of course. College graduations. Relationships and breakups. Marriages, children, new houses, exciting careers. For many of us, though, it all started here at Tantasqua, where we finished growing up. There were days that seemed to drag on forever, and days and weeks that flew by so quickly it can be difficult to remember them with clarity.

Wherever we end up in life, wherever our days end, we all have at least one thing in common: we began in the same place, at the same time, and for several years our lives were connected. Some memories will fade, but this time will always have been ours.





From the Editor

The pages are bound and every May, as the school year shows its first signs of retiring, a brand new yearbook becomes a prevalent accessory. Dangling from the arms of our friends, classmates and peers, every yearbook returns memories we have long forgotten and becomes a way for us to hold on as time passes against our will. Not just a book, but something a little more, something to help us reminisce when days have passed and hopefully make us smile to think of the way we once were.

The book itself, however, starts much earlier than most would assume. This year we began in early June of 2006, assigning jobs, starting anew, and building momentum to such a big commitment. The next step was the much-discussed "Yearbook Camp," which much to our dismay had neither campfire songs nor roasted marshmallows. Yet it did allow us to be exposed to many interesting people, and the camp provided a place to learn the basics of yearbook software and also the mentality to create rather than to dream.

We started from there, coming into school well before the opening day to plan and complete the tedious jobs that would allow us to move onto bigger accomplishments. A job needed to be done and we were there to do it. Four deadlines, thousands of pictures, and 204 pages later, the hours had been tallied and time had taken its toll. We were done, we had completed an almost yearlong deed and documented its days along the way for what we had hoped would be much more than a "scrapbook."

This book, however, is not just a collection of pictures and thoughts; it is a creation, made from the very first idea, to the last bit of edited work. It is a project, handled by few, watched over by many and judged by most. But, somewhere in between, we are the ones responsible for all of the work.

We are the ones with the cameras around our necks taking pictures when others are enjoying games and plays and whatever might being going on in Tantasqua. We are the ones asking questions, tallying superlative votes, and recording your thoughts onto paper. We are the ones behind the scenes, working diligently, creating and editing so we never forget what is was like.

And so, as you read the final words of something we hold in very high regard, we thank you. We hope you will pick this book up many times to remember what this year was and what it meant to us, all of us.
